Vincent Astor's Plan
On Earth, In Air

—By Arthur Brisbane—

BY RADIO, S. S. Aquitania, at sea, August 4, on the Aquitania, half way to Cherbourg, International News overtakes you with this: "Coolidge says, 'I do not choose to run for the Presidency in nineteen twenty-eight.'"

Millions will puzzle over that word "choose." Editor Parker of the New York Telegram, aboard this boat, says it means: "I am not seeking re-election in nineteen twenty-eight. I do not choose it, but if the people nominate me I shall not refuse."

The President's meaning to this writer seems just the opposite and absolutely clear. Selecting his words admirably, he says: "I could be re-elected in nineteen twenty-eight if I choose, but I do not choose. I have been elected once. I am entitled to a second election. There is no third election or third term question involved. No candidate could beat me for the Republican nomination. No Democrat could beat me at the polls, but I DO NOT CHOOSE TO RUN."

Nearly a year ago at the White House, when a second election was mentioned by this writer, the President said: "That is hardly a friendly suggestion." The President felt that if he carried his load until March, 1929, he would deserve a rest.

He has told that to members of his Cabinet. Secretaries Mellon and Hoover had recently told the writer on separate occasions that public opinion would practically compel the President to run for a second election. President Coolidge shut his mouth a little tighter than usual and said nothing, which he does with ease.

What if the Republican convention should nominate Coolidge on the first ballot. His action in that case might depend on happenings between now and next July. President Coolidge will not shirk plain duty or set his wishes above those of the people, but when he said "I do not choose to run" he said that he did not want a second nomination, and said it sincerely.

The President's announcement is the only topic discussed on board, although other news comes by radio. Chicago is to have the big fight, located with complete absence of humor, on Soldiers' Field. The Chicago Cubs lead. M. Tate, who plays cricket for Sussex, made the season's first double, one thousand runs and one hundred wickets. Britain is building air battleships with foghorns, anchors, riding lights, hammocks for fighting men, and will keep them based at Singapore. Polite warning to Asia.

All that news, and more, came

NOTED GRIDIRON STAR, UNABLE TO GET $20,000 BAIL, IS SENT TO JAIL

Charles E. Brickley, who won undying fame on the gridiron under the colors of John Harvard, is lodged today in the Charles Street Jail, charged with the theft of more than $60,000 from three clients. He is also charged with conducting a bucket-shop.

Brickley saw service in the World War and has been conducting a brokerage business in Devonshire street for the past year and a half under the firm name of the Charles E. Brickley Company.

For months past Inspectors Frank Hagerty and Georgs Farrell have been investigating activities carried on by the former all-American halfback and recently a number of secret indictments were returned against him.

Today these indictment warrants were served and Brickley was taken before Judge Quinn in Suffolk Superior criminal court. His bail was fixed at $20,000, which he was unable to furnish, and he was lodged in the Charles street jail pending arraignment.

Brickley is specifically charged with larceny of $13,000 from Georgianna Boynton of Marlboro; the larceny of $45,000 from Patrick Callihan of the South End and the larceny of $5,000 from James McColgan of the South End. The former grid star is also charged with conducting a bucketshop.

The police allege Brickley secured funds from his clients for the purpose of purchasing certain stock and bonds. These securities, it is alleged, were never purchased and it is further alleged Brickley converted the money to his own use.

PRIEST AT BEACHMONT SAVES DROWNING GIRL

The Rev. William A. Long, son of Park Commissioner and Mrs. William P. Long of Boston, demonstrated that he is of heroic timber, when he plunged, fully clad, into the ocean off Roughan's Point, Beachmont, and rescued a twelve-year-old girl from drowning.

Father Long, who is a curate of St. Catherine's Church, Graniteville, is spending a vacation at the Summer home of his parents at Beachmont.

The priest was seated on a rock along the shore, immersed in the reading of his office, when he was startled by a faint cry for help.

About fifty yards off shore a small float was ancnored and several persons were swimming about. The call came from a small girl who endeavored to swim to the raft and

GIRL SLAYS FILM MAN AND SELF OVER LOVE

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 5 (A.P.).—Unrequited love was held by the police today to have caused Betty M. Gottlieb, twenty-five, to slay Hamilton W. Mannon, twenty-six, movie studio official, and then fire a fatal bullet into her own head while they sat in an automobile about midnight.

Mannon was dead with a bullet in the brain when the police were called by persons who heard the shooting. Miss Gottlieb was slumped in her seat beside Mannon, a bullet wound in the head and a pistol in her right hand. She died later in an emergency hospital.

The police reported that Albert D'Agnostino, an associate of Mannon's in the Technical Arts Studio, of which the slain man was vice-president, told them the couple had been much in each other's company

SAYRE JOINS HILL IN SACCO FIGHT

Application for a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts, "to take Sacco and Vanzetti out of the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts courts," was predicted today by Professor Francis B. Sayre, Harvard law school instructor, son-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson, and new advisory counsel in the Sacco-Vanzetti defence.

Several threats of death and violence, it was learned authoritatively today, have been received by Warden William Hendry of State Prison, who is charged with the duty of seeing that Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti be put to death in the week beginning August 10.

The Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee, still carrying on its fight to save the lives of the two condemned men, disclosed that more than $200,000 has already been spent in lawyer's fees.

A final mass meeting of protest will be held by the committee on Boston Common next Sunday afternoon, it was announced.

FULLER SPEEDS UP FROM RYE WITH ARMED GUARD

With two heavily-armed State policemen in plain clothes riding with him in his automobile and with two armed motorcycle State troopers as an escort, Governor Fuller arrived at his office, today, apparently unconcerned by the elaborate precautions that have been taken by the States of Massachusetts and New Hampshire to guard his life and the lives of the members of his family.

The Governor's ride from his Summer home at Rye Beach, N. H., to the State House was without incident, today, the automobile, at the direction of the police authorities,

TO DEMAND NEW TRIAL FOR SACCO

Sacco-Vanzetti defence counsel will file a motion for a new trial in Superior Court at Dedham tomorrow, following this with a request to Governor Fuller for a respite, and then, in the event of failure in the Superior Court, apply for a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts, according to announcement today by the defence committee. The new trial motion, it was announced, will be based on "newly discovered evidence."

SACCO LAWYERS' FEES TOP $207,500 SINCE 1920

More than $200,000 has been paid in fees to the attorneys who represented Sacco and Vanzetti during the last seven years, it was announced by the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee today.

William G. Thompson, who has just retired as active head of the defense counsel, was paid $27,500 for his services, according to the committee. He was first paid $25,000 and was subsequently paid $12,500.

Fred W. Moore of California, who defended Sacco and Vanzetti at their trial in Dedham, was paid $130,000, while other attorneys who assisted in the case from time to time were paid $40,000.

JULY POSTAL RECEIPTS DROP IN FIFTY CITIES

Washington, Aug. 5 (I.N.S.).—For the first time in months, postal receipts at 50 selected cities showed a decrease, the figures for July totaling $36,299,872.67, as compared with $36,783,420.45 in July, 1926, a decrease of 1.31 per cent. The decrease is attributed to the fact that there were only 25 business days in July last as against 26 a year ago.

The largest percentage of increase was reported by Jersey City, N. J. New Haven, Conn., was second with an increase of 11.79 per cent.

SACCO VERY WEAK; VANZETTI SPENDS TIME WRITING

The police guard at State's Prison and on the Fuller family home at Rye Beach, N. H., was again increased.

Warden Hendry barred Aldino Felicani, treasurer of the defence committee, from the death house, because passages deleted by prison authorities from defiant letters written by Sacco and Vanzetti were reinserted and made public.

Attorney Arthur D. Hill, new chief defense counsel, wrote Governor Fuller he regretted the publication, with which he himself had no connection.

FRANKFURTER THERE

New court action of last resort was planned at a meeting in Attorney Hill's office in the Exchange building, No. 53 State street, whose home present were Attorney Hill, Prof. Sayre, Professor Felix Frankfurter of Harvard Law School, long an ardent worker in behalf of the doomed men, and Attorneys William J. Thompson and Herbert Ehrmann, retiring defense counsel.

Another move for a new trial in the Massachusetts courts was forecast by Attorney M. A. Musmanno of Pittsburgh, who is associated with the defense committee and was present during part of the lawyers' conference, but general indications were that the Federal courts alone would be the scene of action.

Habeas corpus proceedings to save Celestino Madeiros, who is also in the death house at Charlestown with Sacco and Vanzetti, were also being considered today by Francis X. Higgins, formerly counsel for the executed Waltham carbarn slayers and now acting for Madeiros.

The move to save Sacco and Vanzetti will probably be made in Federal District Court in Boston or before Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, who is spending the Summer at Beverly Farms.

No Appeal to U. S.

Prominent lawyers not associated with the case said that the law barred an appeal to the United States Supreme Court, including application for a writ of certiorari, but did not bar application for a writ of habeas corpus which is not an appeal, either in the U. S. District Court or to a Supreme Court justice.

The police guard at State Prison was increased today, as was the guard at Governor Fuller's Summer place at Rye Beach, N. H., while the Governor rode to Boston and back to the beach accompanied by two armed motorcycle troopers.

HENDRY DEFIES THREAT

Pursuing his policy of silence, the State Prison warden kept from the public information of the threats he received, but it was learned that he asked for police protection for the prison five days before Governor Fuller made his decision not to intervene in the world-famous case.

The warden's sole comment, when questioned about the threats, was:

"Well, I am not afraid to go out on the streets at night. If the end is coming that way, let it come."

Information gleaned at the prison disclosed that Warden Hendry and Deputy Warden James Hogsett believed the proper thing to do was to ignore absolutely any kind of threatening communication, but that their wives, who live with them at the prison, learned of the threats and urged that special precautions be taken.

Warden Hendry's courage is well known. He displayed his nerve on one occasion several years ago when a prisoner armed with a razor barricaded himself in his cell.

Instead of assigning others to enter and subdue him, the warden took Prison Officer Daniel Griffin with him, and together they smashed down the barricade and overpowered the armed prisoner, both officials receiving several wounds in the encounter. Warden Hendry was slashed about the hips and legs.

BAN ON FELICANI

Attorney William G. Thompson, who resigned as chief defense counsel, sprang a surprise today by accompanying Mrs. Rose Sacco to the prison, where she visited the condemned men alone. Thompson's actions during the day disclosed that he was still active in, although no longer directing the legal fight.

Aldino Felicani, treasurer of the defense committee, was with Mrs. Sacco and Attorney Thompson. Warden Hendry barred Felicani from the death house, giving as his reason the fact that passages deleted by Deputy Warden Hogsett from the letters of defiance written by Sacco and Vanzetti were reinserted and published.

The trio evidently expected to go right to the death house, but on arrival Attorney Thompson was called into conference in the warden's office and the warden's announcement, barring Felicani, followed.

"I am in no position to allow anybody at this institution to criticize the Governor of Massachusetts in the manner done in the letters written by Sacco and Vanzetti," said Warden Hendry.

"Offensive passages were deleted by Deputy Warden Hogsett. The letters in question, as I understand it, were first given to Attorney Thompson and by him to Felicani. When the letters were given out for publication the deleted passages had been reinserted."

Thompson left the prison, while Mrs. Sacco went to the death cells. An hour later she emerged and broke down weeping, while Felicani, who had waited, tried to comfort her.

Attorney Thompson later went into conference with Attorney Arthur D. Hill, new counsel for the prisoners, at the Exchange Building and returned to State prison with two envelopes which he gave to the warden. These were believed to be papers for Sacco and Vanzetti to sign in connection with a new fight in the courts.

PROF. SAYRE'S PLAN

Professor Sayre said to a Boston Evening American reporter:

"The Constitution of the United States provides that no man shall be deprived of his life without due process of law. There has been and is today, a serious doubt in the minds of many people as to the guilt of these two men.

"There is a question in my mind whether these men are guilty. I am interested in the sanctity of the constitution of the United States.

"I am interested particularly at this time in that part which, as I say, provides that no man shall be deprived of his life without due process to law.

"It is the duty of everyone to do his part and to see that the integrity of the Constitution of the United States is upheld. That is why I am interested. I also want to see the integrity of the Massachusetts courts upheld.

"The basis of a move for these men to the United States Supreme Court to save them from execution at this time are two cases which came before the Supreme Court.

"I have one in mind and it is found in the U. S. reports. I have one I can quote now, U. S. 261 H-6, where some negroes were tried and found guilty in Arkansas. Their trial was simply a miscarriage of justice. The whole thing was a travesty on justice.

"It was so evidently and manifestly lacking in justice that a writ of habeas corpus in that case was maybe I will be again in reference case came before the latter court in 1922 and was decided in 1923.

"It is the habeas corpus idea or along that line that will be invoked in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti. Of course the whole matter is in the hands of Arthur D. Hill. I have been in conference with him and maybe I will be again in reference to the matter.

"I should rather that Mr. Hill give out the other case I have in mind as a basis of habeas corpus proceedings. As I said there is a serious doubt in the minds of men interested in the law whether all the Massachusetts law was lived up to in the trial and conviction of these men.

"I am not preparing any writ of certiorari for presentation either Justice Brandies or Justice

Bellanca Plans New Flight to Recover Air Record

New York, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—G. M. Bellanca, airplane designer and builder, announced today that plans are under way for a flight in a new Bellanca plane, to be piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin, transatlantic flier, to recapture the world's endurance record.

Bellanca designed the plane with which Chamberlin and Bert Acosta established the previous record of 51 hours, 11 minutes and 25 seconds, which was broken today by the Junker W-3 in Germany.

When informed of the Junker's record, Bellanca said:

"I am confident we will bring the record back to America. I am building ten planes, embodying new features, and I hope to get Chamberlin to pilot one of them in another endurance flight.

disregarding all speed laws on the trip.

Governor Fuller remained in Boston only a short time. He visited his son, Alvan, Jr., who is recovering from an operation for appendicitis at the Phillips House. Then he returned to his Summer home, arriving there with his guard shortly before noon.

The Governor indicated that he would remain at Rye for the week-end, but would probably visit his son at the hospital tomorrow and also on Sunday.

The Governor's Summer home and the grounds surrounding it are in reality an armed camp.

Governor Spalding of New Hampshire offered the Governor a company of New Hampshire National Guardsmen to protect his Summer home, but Governor Fuller declined this offer.

GUARDED EVERY MINUTE.

The New Hampshire authorities are taking no chances, however. Twenty New Hampshire State police and town officers from the Rye police department have been assigned to the Governor's house and grounds. Twelve of these armed guards are on duty throughout the night, while eight are on duty during the day.

In addition, two New Hampshire motorcycle policemen will accompany the Governor's car from the moment it crosses the State line from Massachusetts on the Governor's trips here.

Returning to Boston from Rye, the Governor's car will be escorted to the State line where the Massachusetts officers will be in waiting to continue as escort.

In addition to all these guards, two Massachusetts State troopers live in the Governor's Summer home.

They have been sworn in as New Hampshire special officers and their specific duty is to guard Mrs. Fuller and the members of the Fuller household.

GOVERNOR IS UNMOVED.

The Governor, himself, seems undisturbed at the elaborate precautions that have been taken to guard him and his family.

The Governor was up and about before 8 o'clock, today. He spent twenty-five minutes in walking about the grounds of the estate and then left for Boston with his guards.

D'Agostino said that recently Miss Gottlieb had been making telephone calls to Mannon at all hours of the day. He declared she had Mannon's friendship.

The police said Miss Gottlieb apparently had an independent income but worked frequently as a re-touch artist in a commercial studio.

A letter written in New York city January 2 last and signed "Min" was found in Mannon's pocket. It referred to a photograph of himself he had sent the writer and said, in part: "Ham, dear, how do you like the new life? I hope you haven't forgotten entirely. If you have been foolish and gotten married please tell the little lady of my existence.

"Some day I may decide to see you and she would have to know anyway. I might pass as an aunt."

SACCO GENERAL STRIKE ON IN BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—A general strike in protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti sentence went into effect today. Nearly all the workers in factories and shops joined the movement.

Port activities were slow owning to the absence of many stevedores, but the general aspect of the city appeared normal, as banks and commercial establishments were not affected.

The chauffeurs are continuing their strike, begun last week with view of getting a change in traffic regulations.

MURDER WOMAN IN SUBWAY

New York, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—What police believed to be an unusually gruesome murder was discovered today with finding of a woman's body, shot through the breast, in City Hall station of the B. M. T. subway.

She had been killed by a shot fired at close range while scurrying crowds hastened for their trains a few feet away. Her identity was hidden in as much mystery as the circumstances of the killing. No weapon was found.

Blood stains were found in a small compartment adjoining that in which the body was found.

A commutation ticket for transportation between Grand Central terminal and a station in the Bronx issued to Mrs. Emma Weingand was found in the woman's pocketbook. A card found bore the name of Dorothea Weingand.

BRITISH ASK FULLER DECISION BE REVERSED

London, Aug. 5 (I.N.S.).—Great demonstrations before the American embassy "to protest against the judicial murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and to demand the reversal of Governor Fuller's decision" are planned here for Sunday.

British protests are being arranged by the international class for war prisoners' aid, and it is announced the appeals have the support of George Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Lieutenant Commander Kenworthy, M. P.; George Lansbury, M. P.; James Maxton, M. P.; Oswald Mosely, M. P.; and John Wheatley, M. P.

Scotland Yard has taken precautions here and American official buildings are under guard. It is not anticipated there will be any violence.

Boston's Greeting Is Sent Mussolini

Another Boston link in the chain of friendship to be stretched between the United States and Italy by the coming flight to Rome of Hearst's monoplane, "Old Glory," was forged today by a letter from Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols to Premier Benito Mussolini.

The letter to be carried with others on the epochal flight of the big Fokker plane, to be flown by Pilots Lloyd Bertaud and James DeWitt Hill, reads:

I send to you and to the people of Rome my own and Boston's warmest compliments and greetings, with the sincere hope that the development of air transportation will link our cities in an even closer bond of friendship to both our mutual satisfaction and advantage.

Boston will eventually become the terminal of a great transoceanic passenger and express airservice, as our great city is the nearest large metropolis to Europe and is the logical starting point for all European transatlantic flights.

Mr. William Randolph Hearst through his various newspapers in the United States is doing praiseworthy work in the interests of aviation and his efforts should be commended.

Boston has just had the distinguished honor of greeting the oceanic aviators and has been following with marked interest the great successes of your own people, such as Pinedo, who paid us the honor of a visit a few short weeks ago.

What a far cry it is from the days of Christopher Columbus and his Santa Maria to the distance-annihilating maneuvers of today, when your great country is brought much closer to these United States. The subject of aviation is foremost today in the minds of our people.

With every assurance of my high regard and esteem, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Malcolm E. Nichols.

Bennington Battle Stamps on Sale in Hub Office

Issues of two new stamps were placed on sale at Boston Post Office today. One commemorates the 150th anniversary of the independence of Vermont and Battle of Bennington; the other the defeats of General Burgoyne in the War of the Revolution.

The Bennington stamp is the same size and shape as the ordinary stamp and printed in red. The central design represents a Green Mountain boy in buckskin leaning on his rifle. At the left is a loose ribbon bearing the name, "Bennington." On ribbon scrolls in the upper corners are "1777" and "1927."

The Burgoyne stamp is the size and shape of the special delivery stamp, printed in red ink, the central design representing the surrender of Burgoyne enclosed in panels bearing the names of the battlefields: Fort Stanwix, Oriskany and Bennington.

BULLETS FLY AS COAT THIEF IS CAPTURED

After a half mile chase during which three shots were fired, Ralph Washington, 28, of Harvard street, Everett, was arrested today charged with breaking and entering in the night time and larceny from the home of R. Salevitz, No. 57 Irving street, Everett.

Mrs. Salevitz was awakened by a noise in time to see a man leaving the house. She screamed, arousing her husband, who discovered the coat of his Sunday suit had been stolen.

The police were notified, and a squad of officers searched the neighborhood. Officer Sewell Grout saw a suspicious shadow on Nichols street, and accompanied by Officer Harry Taylor, investigated. The shadow departed at high speed, but its owner, who proved to be Washington, was run down. He was wearing the stolen coat, police say.

In Malden court, Washington pleaded guilty and was held in $2,000 for the grand jury.

FORMER BROKER IN HUB JAILED IN LARCENY

Charged in three counts with larceny of $15,000 from Mrs. Mima A. Yerkes and her daughter, Mrs. Bertha Y. Lydiard, both of Cambridge, George B. Creesy, 38, former Boston broker, was arrested at his home on Chestnut street, Needham, today.

The warrant, obtained by Inspectors Haggerty, Joyce and Farrell of the bank squad, was served by Inspectors Coleman and Morrison accompanied by Needham police.

Creesy, who went out of business and closed his Devonshire street office about a year ago, was taken to police headquarters, and after being finger printed and photographed was confined in City Prison.

The complaint alleges that Mrs. Yerkes gave Creesy $9,500 in three amounts for investment, and her daughter $5,500, between 1923 and 1926. They tried frequently to obtain an accounting, but were unsuccessful.

A. D. WHITNEY DIES ON ISLAND

Arthur D. Whitney, Watertown selectman and former Boston business man, died at his Summer home at Marthas Vineyard early today of heart trouble. He was 67 years old and had been ill a year.

Flags in Watertown were half-staffed in tribute to Mr. Whitney, who was at one time chairman of the selectmen. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Minetta Osgood Whitney.

Mr. Whitney, whose estate is located off Main street, Watertown, was for many years a member of the Boston firm of Hollingsworth & Whitney. The funeral will take place Monday afternoon from St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, Watertown.

BAY STATE LABOR TO DROP ITS YEAR BOOK

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 5 (A.P.)—The Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor in convention session here today voted to discontinue the year book, published annually as a means of raising funds. It was generally agreed the method was poor and that advertisers did not always receive value for their money.

CITY DESTROYS BAD SALMON

City health inspectors today destroyed 50,000 cans of salmon, condemned as unfit for food, at the Southampton street dump, South Boston.

Following the opening of 1,032 cases of the salmon, the cans were smashed and buried a depth of four feet in the ground. The salmon was seized some months ago and held in storage.

The salmon was packed in 1922. The packers requested the city health authorities to hold up destruction until they were given a chance to arrange for its distribution for other than food purposes, sale of cat food being one of the suggestions offered by a local agent.

It was finally decided proper protection of the public necessitated destruction to prevent the product getting into food channels.

Destruction of the fish was under the supervision of Health Commissioner Dr. Francis X. Mahoney and Deputy Health Commissioner Dr. Frank H. Mullowney.

SCITUATE BOAT RUNS AGROUND

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 5 (A.P.)—The three-masted schooner Ethleen McFaden of Parraboro, N. S., ran aground on rocks four miles off Little River Head, Maine, early today, according to a report received at Coast Guard headquarters here.

The schooner, under British registry, was bound empty from Scituate, Mass., to her home port when she struck in the dense fog. The crew of the Cross Island Coast Guard station of Machiasport, was standing by the wreck but the schooner' crew were not believed in any danger because of the light wind.

The cutter Kickapoo has been dispatched from Portland, but because of the distance it must go the upper Maine coast was being searched for tugs to assist in the salvage.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Leslie Buswell's Dreams Come True as Triumph Is Added to Triumph at Stillington Hall

FROM TRIUMPH TO TRIUMPH the Stillington Hall season moves serenely on. The midweek's opera offering, "Figaro," brought a house crowded to the very doors, while Thursday afternoon's audience for the subscription musicale was large, and, of course, very smart. Thus do dreams come true, as Leslie Buswell dreams and then proceeds to put them into execution with finish and dispatch. His contention that the North Shore would take an opera-musicale-dramatic season to its hearts is brilliantly proven. The North Shore has done just that.

STILLINGTON OF AN EVENING, with its mysterious cloister-approach and its twinkling lights is a magic setting for music or drama. But in the sunlight of a Summer afternoon it takes on other aspects, equally delightful. For then one can glance through its casement windows toward a sparkling sea, the while notes of a violin played by a master rise and fall, or as a dancer, lithe and light as thistledown, moves rhythmically. Mr. Buswell set his home and his hall high over the Gloucester coastline to command a panorama of sea and landscape of great beauty.

MR. AND MRS. M. GRAEME HAUGHTON were at the musicale. Mrs. Haughton in one of the flowered chiffons that chime so beautifully with Summer sun and sky. Miss Jean Sears, wearing an enormous black straw hat and a frock of sea-green, was in the smart and interesting audience. Mrs. George Eddy Warren wore a gorgeously colored coat. Geranium red and green combined in a brilliant design on white, to create a garment that caught and held the eye.

MRS. J. HENRY LANCASHIRE of Graftonwood was in a summery frock of knitted fabric with a floppy leghorn hat to finish it off. Mrs. Bayard Warren, pretty as a picture, was distinctive in her frock, that had a tint of green, and a wide cora-colored chapeau. Mrs. Maynard Ladd and her daughter, Miss Vernon Ladd, motored over from Arden to Stillington for the musicale. Miss Grace Monks was there. So was Mrs. Henry Endicott, in flowered chiffon. Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes wore a wide black hat and a stunning gown of hydrangea blue silk crepe.

MISS MARY POST WAS ONE OF the young girl squad to serve as ushers. Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard, very smart and distinctive in oyster white, wore a small hat caught up, a la harem, with a brown veil. Mr. and Mrs. Sears B. Condit, with their pretty blonde daughter, Mrs. Andrew Nickerson Winslow, Jr., were in the audience held enthralled by Alfredo San Malo, violinist, and Miss Anna Duncan, dansease. Mr. San Malo is a nephew of the Argentinian minister and Miss Duncan is a protege of the famous Isadora, so both have a measure of fame aside from that which their art brings them.

STILLINGTON'S NEXT AFFAIR is the "opera intime" that has made such a distinct hit. The American company is putting on

American Company Putting on Figaro at Stillington Hall, Gloucester, on Saturday Evening

"Figaro" on Saturday evening before a house that promises to more than fill Stillington. And as for the dramatics, Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman's comedy is passing through preliminary stages of preparation and has already progressed so far as to be cast. Mr. Buswell and Mrs. Fitzwilliam Sargent play the "Freddy" and the "Vivian" of "Fool's Paradise," as Mrs. Whitman calls her play.

MISS DOROTHY ROSS PLAYS the second lead. Hugh Miller, Ralph McBane and George Fleming Houston each have parts. The latter is the young man who made such a hit as "Mephisto" in "Faust," the opera company's first presentation. Mr. McBane and Mr. Miller were in the theatre party Mrs. Whitman entertained for "Figaro." She was also hostess to her brother, Erwin Chatfield Taylor, just returned from Europe.

From now on it's rehearsal every day and all day at Stillington. After yesterday's musicale the Stillington Players were entertained informally by Mr. Buswell just before they set earnestly to work toward polishing off "Fool's Paradise" for perfect presentation.

CAPT. DIEHL TO FACE TRIAL

Judge James A. Lowell, in the Federal Court today handed down a decision on the two demurrers to the indictments found against Capt. John H. Diehl of Everett, commander of the City of Rove which rammed the submarine S-51 off Block Island September 25, 1925, causing the death of most of the crew.

Judge Lowell sustained the demurrer on the more serious of the indictments, which charged Captain Diehl with "negligence and inattention to his duties" thereby causing the City of Rome to ram and sink the submarine, with the ensuing loss of life.

SIX DRIVEN OUT IN REVERE FIRE

Six people, including four children, were driven to the street, today, when fire swept through two cottages on Hutchinson street, Revere, just in the rear of St. Anthony's Catholic church.

The fire broke out in the unoccupied cottage of Joseph Rand at No. 62 Hutchinson street and spread to the adjoining cottage occupied by Anthony Palmeri, his wife and four children. Patrolman John Hanahan assisted the Palmeri family to the street.

OLD GLORY WILL MAKE SPEED TEST TODAY

New York, Aug. 5.—Old Glory, the William Landolph Hearst monoplane that is being groomed for a history-making transatlantic flight from New York to Rome, will have her speed test this afternoon.

The slight damage caused by a "jenny" plane which had gotten out of control of a student flier and which had torn a gash a foot square in one of the wings of Old Glory, has been repaired, and the big monoplane was today declared as sound as ever.

The three engineers of the Hearst monoplane risked their lives in saving Old Glory from greater damage. It was due to the daring of these men, Hecto, Alexander, John J. Mo-Veigh and Paul Bartmer, that the machine escaped with only a gash in one wing.

Old Glory was at the edge of the field when the "jenny" plane, containing Andy Sarini and Ed Bersen, flying instructor, came down the field traveling about 30 miles an hour. Sarini lost control, he said.

As the "jenny" plane was about to crash into Old Glory, the three engineers turned the machine around, so that only the wing was damaged.

Charlie Ellsworth, radio expert, rushed to the assistance of the engineers, and barely missed being caught in the propeller of Sarini's machine.

MINERS FOUGHT BRAVELY AFTER BLAST; 15 ARE DEAD

Clay, Ky., Aug. 5 (A.P.).—Mute evidence of a dramatic struggle by West Carter and Green Russel, negro miners, to save their lives in the West Kentucky Coal Company mine disaster here was found by rescue workers in a little room in entry No. 10, 900 feet from where the explosion occurred.

They found that the two men had torn their clothing from their bodies and stuffed it into cracks around the room to shut out the poisonous air.

Today, the bodies of 15 miners, who died as the result of the explosion, had been brought to the surface and identified.

LEGION WARNED OUT OF PARIS IF SACCO DIES

Paris Aug. 5 (A.P.).—L'Humanite, Socialist organ, urges the proletariat to use every means save Sacco and Vanzetti, by monster meetings, resolutions, street manifestations and a general strike.

"If Sacco and Vanzetti are executed—which we still like to believe is inadmissible," it says, "any congress of the American Legion will become absolutely impossible in Paris."

The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee is planning to organize a great demonstration on the outer boulevards of Paris Sunday afternoon. L'Oeuvre believes it is likely the government will authorize the demonstration, inasmuch as the committee has announced it will be "peaceful." In addition, a 24-hour strike is to be called Monday by the Extremist Unified Labor Federation.

The police guards are being continued about the American embassy, consulate and other American buildings.

Gustave Tery, managing editor of L'Oeuvre, which took the initiative recently in forming a Sacco-Vanzetti committee, whose announced intention was to go to the United States to plead the cause of the condemned men, says:

"It is bad for Franco-American relations. Are we going to lose at one blow by the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti all that the heroic noble prowess of Lindbergh has won? It is neither very reasonable nor very rational, perhaps, but it is none the less regrettable for both countries.

"Whatever may be the facts of the case, there is one thing which stands out above all. It is that for nearly seven years the two condemned men have been awaiting death and that the responsible authorities have hesitated to deliver them over to the executioner. Everybody is agreed in recognizing that Sacco and Vanzetti, even if guilty, would have sufficiently expiated the offense by the sole punishment involved in this long anguish."

VANZETTI LAUDED FULLER IN LETTER TO 'COMRADES'

A remarkable letter, written several weeks ago by Bartolomeo Vanzetti to his "comrades in France," in which he extolled Governor Fuller, denounced Judge Grant of the advisory committee, and renounced all hope for life, was made public today.

Writing of the hunger strike of himself and Sacco, Vanzetti said: "We were convinced that they are going to assassinate us," and that the authorities will execute "two death men."

The letter closes with a request to his comrades to carry on "till victory."

"Pick up our gloves," he wrote, "and rise them high as flags of our bountiful and sublime anarchy."

Referring to the Governor's investigation which had just started Vanzetti wrote:

PRAISE FOR GOVERNOR.

"The first three men he invited to the commission are of good reputation and character. When two of them declined he asked President Stratton and Judge Grant to join President Lowell as members of the commission.

"Because Judge Grant was and still is suspected by many of partiality and even hostility to us, the Governor questioned him several times before he appointed him. Then he decided that the advisory shall investigate, advise and report privately and separately from his own inquiry.

"Then he decided a respite of 30 days for our execution and did so before July 1 intentionally we are told, to let us remain in Dedham jail for another 30 days. Finally he revealed to us and to the other two sentenced to death, Madeiros and Boglioni, to have a morning walk on the balcony of our cells never allowed before.

"All this seems to prove that he is human, is goodly inclined toward us, and what is more, that he, the Governor, had been sincere assuring our friends that if our case would have reached his office, he would have given it a due consideration and that he had no preconception or predecision on and to our case. All which hum privately and separately from his own inquiry.

Farther down he wrote: "What I fear is that the Governor cannot or will not understand our case and give us not justice—for it is no longer possible, but a late stopping of our seven years of slow murder."

HITS AT JUDGE GRANT.

Commenting on the advisory commission, he said:

"President Lowell and President Stratton are two great scholars and gave me the impression of men impartial and well-intentioned who will not decide against us for no other motive than their honest conviction of our guilt. But the retired judge of the probate court gave me the impression of a type o. man whose feelings are offended by the things and reasons which we are forced to say about the case and in our defense, because they are very contrary to our ideas and favorable to Thayer & Co., being of the same class and idea."

Again he wrote:

"All the bad news and impressions plus the news that everyone at the State House is saying that the Governor is set to burn us, and that our witnesses are openly disbelieved by this commission and the Governor—while they trust all the State perjurers—convinced us that we are actually dealt in the same ways and spirit that we have been from the beginning."

KILL "TWO DEATH MEN."

"We were convinced that they are going to assassinate us, and therefore I decided to protest and react against it and the only possible way remained for us a hunger strike, and I began it on the morning of July 13. Nick followed me on July 17.

"I believe that we will be one after the other, executed immediately after midnight of August 10. Keeping on the hunger strike, we will be agonizing at that time even if they will inflict us the torture and humiliation of forced nutrition—and like Maramaldos, our miserable enemies shall kill two death men."

Montreal Slayer Hanged

Montreal, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—George Morle was hanged in Bordeau Jail here today for the murder of Andre Marreille. Both were natives of France. The crime followed a quarrel over a woman.

Sacco Death to Be Blot on U. S., Says London Herald

London, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—The Labor-Socialist Herald says that if Sacco and Vanzetti are sent to the chair, "their death will be an indelible blot, not only on the State of Massachusetts but on the United States, and produce far-reaching reprisals on the workers' attitude to the existing machinery of justice in America and other lands."

Farther down he writes: "What I fear is that the Governor cannot or will not understand our case and give us not justice—for it is no longer possible, but a late stopping of our seven years of slow murder."

HITS AT JUDGE GRANT.

"All the bad news and impressions plus the news that everyone at the State House is saying that the Governor is set to burn us, and that our witnesses are openly disbelieved by this commission and the Governor—while they trust all the State perjurers—convinced us that we are actually dealt in the same ways and spirit that we have been from the beginning."

KILL "TWO DEATH MEN."

"We were convinced that they are going to assassinate us, and therefore I decided to protest and react against it and the only possible way remained for us a hunger strike, and I began it on the morning of July 13. Nick followed me on July 17.

"I believe that we will be, one after the other, executed immediately after midnight of August 10. Keeping on the hunger strike, we will be agonizing at that time even if they will inflict us the torture and humiliation of forced nutrition—and like Maramaldos, our miserable enemies shall kill two death men."

QUINCY WOMAN WROTE 'SACCO WIDOW WIRE'

Mrs. Adda Florence of Quincy, close friend of Mrs. Allesandro Berardelli, widow of the murdered South Braintree paymaster's guard today asserted that the telegram asking Governor Fuller to free Sacco and Vanzetti if they were innocent, was authorized by Mrs Berardelli during a visit to her home in New Haven. She was puzzled over an interview with the slain man's widow in which she denied sending the telegram.

Mrs. Jessica Henderson of Wayland, who was with Mrs. Florence during her stay at the Berardelli home, substantiated Mrs. Florence's story.

"During our call at Mrs. Berardelli's home in New Haven," said Mrs. Henderson, "we talked of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and the question of the men's innocence. Mrs. Berardelli and she did not want to see innocent men punished and asked Mrs. Florence to send a telegram to that effect on our way to Massachusetts.

SENT BY MRS. FLORENCE.

"The New Haven Railroad station was the first telegraph office we reached. There Mrs. Florence wrote out the telegram along the lines requested by Mrs. Berardelli, and it was sent. It read:

"'I am one of the two who suffered most from the Braintree murder. I lost my husband and father of my two children, but I would be sorry to have two innocent men put to death. I have always doubted that Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty, and I hope you will free them and let them go home to their families.'

"If Mrs. Berardelli has repudiated what she told us to do, she has been frightened by somebody. She would never voluntarily go back on her friend Mrs. Florence, and say she did not authorize the telegram to Governor Fuller. I was with Mrs. Florence at the time of her talk with Mrs. Berardelli, and read the telegram when it was sent."

DENIED SENDING WIRE.

In an interview, Mrs. Berardelli was quoted as saying: "Once I was asked if I wanted to see anyone published who was innocent. And then I saw in the newspapers where I was made to say that those men are innocent. I never said anything like that, for I was only asked if I wanted to see anyone punished for something he did not do, and I said I would not want to see any innocent person punished."

Mrs. Florence, who says she sent the telegram at Mrs. Berardelli's request, expressed surprise at the denial and has written to the widow asking for an explanation.

"My visit to Mrs. Berardelli was a friendly call as I was passing through New Haven, and it was only in the course of our conversation that the question of the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti came up, followed by the idea of sending the telegram," said Mrs. Florence.

Final Sacco Protest on Common Sunday

The final Sacco-Vanzetti meeting of protest in Boston will be held on Boston Common Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, according to an announcement made today by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee.

Speakers of reputation in liberal circles will be secured from New York, Chicago and other cities. The defense committee members declared while the meeting would be futile as far as obtaining results was concerned, it would show to the world there is a protest against the Massachusetts courts and Governor Fuller in the action they have taken.

There will be no parade of any kind and a permit for the use of the Common already granted to another organization will likely be utilized.

The defense committee today received $100 from Bishop and Mrs. William Montgomery of Galion, O., who wired the money, "Give our affectionate sympathy to Sacco and Vanzetti," read the message which accompanied the money, "and tell them to quit their hunger strike."

Tampa's Sacco Strike Ends; Vote for Day of Mourning

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 5 (U.N.S.)—Approximately 15,000 cigar factory workers returned to work today after walking out on a general strike yesterday in protest against Governor Fuller's refusal to grant executive clemency to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

After a mass meeting at the Tampa Labor Temple, at which more than 6,000 were present, a resolution setting aside the day of execution as a day of mourning was drafted. Every cigar worker was ordered to don black and to hang crepe in the doorway of his home on the day of execution. Tampa cigar factories will remain closed at that time.

Hear Echoes of Sacco Case 'Round World

By the Associated Press.

How Governor Alvan T. Fuller's decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case echoed around the world:

Berlin—Thousands gathered at Lustgarten for Communist demonstration. Another large meeting scheduled for Friday; American embassy under special guard.

Moscow—Resolutions decrying decision and tendering sympathy to Sacco and Vanzetti reported passed by workers' organizations.

London—Demonstration scheduled for Sunday at Trafalgar square, after which deputation is to visit American Embassy.

Tokyo—Embassy guarded while police watch neighborhood at Hayama, where Ambassador Mac Veigh is spending his vacation.

Rio De Janeiro—Municipal council adopts resolution protesting against the execution "in the name of American culture and civilization"; embassy and consulates under guard.

Montevideo—Preparations made for general strike on August 10 in protest against decision; legation and consulates and American commercial and industrial establishments guarded.

Mexico City—American embassy and consulates closely watched by police.

Rome—Decision given great prominence in Italian papers but few comment editorially; Tribuna calls decision a "tragic jest after seven years of torture."

Paris—American Embassy guard tripled, but no demonstrations attempted.

Oslo—Labor Party paper characterizes American court proceedings as scandalous and decision a violation of justice.

"Cold-Blooded Murder," Says Big Bill Haywood's Society

Moscow, Aug. 5 (U.N.S.)—Electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti will be "cold-blooded murder of innocent men," declares a resolution passed by the executive committee of "The Society to Aid Revolutions," of which "Big Bill" Haywood is a member.

The resolution urges workers and the world intelligentsia to organize protest demonstrations.

GERMAN SACCO BACKERS WIRE SCHURMAN

Berlin, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—German Socialists and Communists today continued their editorial barrages for liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti with lurid diction.

"The Status of Liberty has become an abomination; its face drips with the blood of hideous murders," cries one Socialist writer.

Among telegrams received by the American ambassador, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, is one signed "The Workers of Halle" which brands the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti as "judicial murder—a blow in the face of the revolutionary workers of the world."

The Berlin Federation of Labor sent Schurman a telegram signed "In the name of 400,000 organized workers" demanding annulment of the death sentence and reopening of the case.

A float showing the mangled figures of Sacco and Vanzetti, also an electric chair and two figures dressed as American Judges did not reach the Lustgarten for last night's Communists' demonstration.

It was stopped shortly after being started toward the Lustgarten from the Berlin east end by the police, who objected to the show as likely to be offensive to the United States.

When the Communists refused to obey orders, the police stormed the float, tearing down the draperies, and a wild fracas followed. The police, using their clubs, arrested twenty of the resisters.

Orders 50,000 N. Y. Dock Workers on Sacco Strike

New York, Aug. 5 (U.N.S.)—Fifty thousand dock workers in the entire local membership of the Marine Transport Workers' Union have been ordered to go on strike all day Tuesday in protest against the execution of Sacco [illegible] Roger Francezon, [illegible] the executive board of [illegible] union, announced today.

Francezon, [illegible] ing the strike decision, [illegible] received a telegram from Le[illegible], general secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World at Chicago, saying that organization throughout the country had been ordered to participate in the strike protest movement. The marine transport workers here are affiliated with the I. W. W.

Fuller "Wrong, But We Must Accept," Says Mrs. Evans

"Governor Fuller tried honestly to do the best he could," said Mrs. Glendower Evans, Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer today, "but his decision in the case is wrong.

"I do not blame anyone for taking Governor Fuller's say so. It is all that I have asked—a full hearing before an unprejudiced tribunal. That we have had and we must accept the consequences."

SACCO FRIENDS CONFER WITH CARBARN LAWYE

Persons interested in the plight of Sacco, Vanzetti and Madeiros, awaiting execution in the death house at State Prison, were in conference today with Atty. Francis Jugging who obtained a stay of execution last August for the Waltham carbarn bandits.

Just what the outcome of the conference would be Atty. Juggins was not ready to state. It is understood the case of Madeiros was given special emphasis at the conference.

There's DEATH in the air

No fly . . no mosquito . . no roach . . escapes alive

IT hangs in the air—a vapor of death for every fly and mosquito in a room. And not one leaves the room alive. For Black Flag is the deadliest insect-killer ever discovered.

Bugs breathe it and die. It contains a secret, vegetable ingredient that is fatal to, and rids your home of roaches, ants, bedbugs, fleas, moths, and other insect pests. And it never overlooks a single bug. But it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

Test for yourself its killing power. Two forms, equally deadly—Liquid and Powder. Buy the form you prefer. At drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. Powder 15c up.

WHERE'S EMILY?

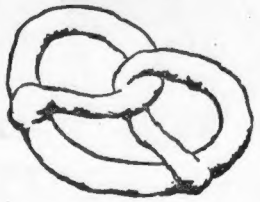
Pretty, vivacious and unconventional Emily, the life of every party of the young ultramoderns, stepped from her doorstep out of the world that loved her two days before her wedding date.

Where was she? Did the swarthy Hindu cult leader know? He had been assured of $50,000 in her will if death claimed her before marriage! Was she the victim of her own persistent disregard of the conventionalities?

Carolyn Wells discovered Emily a wiser girl after a series of almost unbelievable experiences. Let this popular writer introduce you to Emily in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

Where's Emily is a tremendous story.

Bite yourself an Alphabet



Any Pretzeleer Can Reach High C

Yes, even the basso profundo Professo Pretzino we picture tosses off a perfectly pitched C upon the slightest provocation. You need no ear for music to recognize a good C when you see one. Pretzeleers don't bite by ears, but by teeth. And they do their letters in O-So-Guds. Like this:

Musical or not, it's a pleasure to pretzeleer. Even bass drummers do it when they get a chance at O-So-Guds. These pretzels are baked by Uneeda Bakers. Baked brown. Baked crisp. Baked brittle. And with a fine hearty saltiness that makes you want more and more.

Serve pretzels with soup, salad and dessert—with iced drinks, cheese and hors d'oeuvres. They're good to eat with meals or without.

Especially recommended for children because they are so easy to digest and good for teeth and gums.

Ask your grocer how many people are taking home pretzels made by Uneeda Bakers.

WARDEN HENDRY RECEIVES DEATH THREAT

Holmes of the United States Supreme Court. As I say, the matter is in the hands of Mr. Hill.

Governor Fuller's office today received 94 more letters and 56 telegrams, all the letters praising his decision. Of the wired messages, protested. Only one of these 22 was from Massachusetts.

Meantime, at the door of Governor Fuller's house at Rye Beach, Mrs. Eva Head, 28, of Rochester, N. H., was taken into custody by a Bay State trooper and turned over to Chief of Police Irving Madison of North Hampton.

She was questioned later at the Hampton Beach police station by State Police and Chief Marston and then her parents were notified. Her brother left Rochester for the beach to escort her home. Police said she told them she had been in that vicinity since Tuesday.

Two men out of work and professing a desire to go through State Prison, saw the death chair and visit Sacco and Vanzetti in the death-house were turned away from the main gate of the prison today by the guard on duty there, Patrolman James Muldoon of Station 9, Roxbury.

Their apparent innocence of any harmful intention prevented the authorities from making a thorough investigation, according to the police.

"One of them said he thought he knew Sacco and would like to see him on that account," said the patrolman.

"They had their bags of barber tools with them and offered to show the contents when they found I was suspicious. I was convinced that they were entirely innocent before finally sending them away. They gave addresses in Medway and Woburn."

Dr. McLaughlin, after visiting the condemned men's cells, reported that they were pacing back and forth. He described Sacco's steps as "weak."

"I am not making any report to the warden this morning," said the prison physician. "I am not going to make a report to him until I find a marked change in one or the other, or both. I am watching them carefully."

Sacco's endurance, after nineteen days without food, coupled with the shock of the Governor's adverse decision, is amazing prison officials and guards.

Sacco, who believes it is useless, to talk about the case or entertain hope, went to bed in his death cell at 10:30 and slept soundly until morning, but Vanzetti was up until after midnight, writing at the little table in his cell and talking with guards about his case.

Three breakfasts of eggs, toast and coffee were carried into the death house from the prison hospital kitchen, but of the three condemned men, only Madeiros ate.

Five more Boston policemen were added today to the guard around the outside wall of the prison.

No automobiles are to be allowed to enter the prison yard until the occupants have been identified by Warden Hendry. This action was taken to prevent any radically-minded sympathizer from gaining entrance.

As an added precaution at State Prison, orders came from police headquarters to rope off Rutherford avenue for the distance the prison wall stretches along it. Wooden horses were placed at the two extremities of the much-traveled road, and no more traffic will be allowed along it, in all probability, until after August 11. Six automobiles were approached by the guards when they stopped too near the prison, but the occupants were apparently only curious folk wishing to gaze upon the place where the doomed men are confined.

FULLER PRAISED FOR JUSTICE IN SACCO CASE

The office of Governor Fuller was again deluged today with letters and telegrams from all parts of the country complimenting him on his action in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Some of the communications took issue with the Governor's finding, but the great majority commended the Governor "for the fearless manner in which he handled the case and made his decision."

Among congratulatory messages were the following:

BENJAMIN D. HYDE, attorney of No. 50 Congress street: In the maintenance of law and order you have set an example of wisdom and rare courage that has seldom if ever been equalled in this Commonwealth.

FORMER COUNCILLOR GEORGE E. CURRAN: After reading your decision I am now prouder than ever that I served on the Governor's Council with our present Governor. Your decision has received the most favorable comment by all classes.

JOHN R. LEAMY, president of the Natick Trust Co: I wish to express my appreciation of your decision. I hope you take a good rest as you must need it after this severe strain.

WILLIAM H. CUNNINGHAM, assistant secretary of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, Worcester: May I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the courage and excellent judgment shown in your action? A long personal acquaintance with Judge Thayer convinces me the trial was a fair one.

ELIPHALET T. TIFFT, city treasurer of Springfield: Your painstaking and impartial review of the case, completed with courageous decision, strengthens the forces of law and order in this country.

J. L. R. BROWN, treasurer of the Shelburne Falls Savings Bank: Thank the Lord we have another MAN in the Governor's office and that justice still has more than a temporary and precarious seat on her throne.

REV. ANDREW T. F. NOVAK, Greenfield: I was convinced you would give the verdict as you did.

GEORGE SLOAN, Chicago: More men of your courage are needed in this country.

LEONARD D. MOORE, Brooklyn—Congratulations on your stand for America and American ideals. From one whose sire served with a Massachusetts regiment during the American Revolution.

Five American Miss Owners in El Oro, Mexico—We sincerely congratulate the State of Massachusetts on having a Governor who has the splendid moral and physical courage so necessary to render justice in the face of tremendous efforts exerted to defeat and nullify organized law and order in the United States by anarchists, terrorists and feeble-minded and weak-hearted sentimentalists and other fools. We are proud to salute a real American.

Threaten to Blow Up the U. S. Consulate at Nice

Nice, France, Aug. 5 (I.N.S.)—United States Consul Otis Glazebrook has received two letters threatening to blow up the building which houses the United States Consulate.

Residents of the building have moved out of their apartments despite the fact a police guard has been established. A futile attempt to bomb the Consulate building was made two weeks ago.

BORAH WARNS OF TAX BURDEN IN NAVAL RACE

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—The United States should devote its attention to a revival of world armament limitation efforts without attempting to assess the blame for failure of the Geneva conference, in the opinion of Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"I deeply regret some progress was not made at Geneva," Borah said today. "Anything in the nature of a naval race would be a disaster of world-wide consequences.

"The tax burden under which all peoples are now bending is bludgeoning the human family into a state of peonage. It seems incredible that a policy should be pursued which would increase this burden.

"But instead of stopping to assess the blame, I think it better that we consider the best method to avoid the evil consequences and of renewing the effort in the future.

"The last six months have been filled with incidents in international affairs calculated to create suspicion and distrust, to open old sores and to engender bitterness among the weaker nations, all of whom make it impossible to successfully pursue a program of disarmament.

"The international atmosphere at the time of the meeting of this conference was surcharged with suspicion and distrust, upon one hand, and oppression and exploitation upon the other. There is little use in talk about disarmament while such politics obtain."

Washington Opposes Cruiser Building "Race"

Washington, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—While the administration has yet to formulate its policy, it is regarded as certain in well-informed circles here that the collapse of the Geneva conference will not bring a cruiser-building race between the United States and Great Britain.

This view is predicted upon the known views of President Coolidge that the navy should be fashioned solely to the needs of national defence, the economic problem with its tuition particularly to tax reduction, and the expressed hopes of the plenipotentiaries to Geneva and of Secretary Kellogg that ultimately an accord will be reached.

Secretary Wilbur is to take up the naval program with President Coolidge at Rapid City in the near future.

The present judgment of some administration and naval officials is that the United States will go ahead with its original cruiser program, calling for a fleet of 10,000-ton craft carrying eight-inch guns necessary to round out the battle squadron and protect important lines of commerce.

Exhibition Home Opens Sunday

PUBLIC INVITED TO STUDY ITS 'PERFECTION'

At 10 a. m. next Sunday the formal opening of a most distinctive seven room English model home will take place at Warrendale, a suburb, on the Boston Post road between Watertown and Waltham. The house, completely furnished and containing many modern innovations in its equipment, will doubtless attract a goodly number of prospective home-builders who will find many points of help and interest open to inspection. The house is at 12 Brigham road, Waltham.

The public display will continue for two weeks and will be open daily from 1 p. m. until 9 p. m. and Sundays from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m.

This model home was built by Arthur H. Whitcomb, who has been building homes for 35 years, having built in many sections of Greater Boston including Waltham, West Newton, Medford, Revere, Winthrop, Hyde Park and several on the Cape. The company has a record of building 175 houses during the past 30 months.

While several different types of houses will be open to inspection the home furnished and featured is an English type house with living room, dining room, sun room and kitchen on the lower floor and three bedrooms on the floor above. The laundry, heating system and an extra lavatory are in the basement.

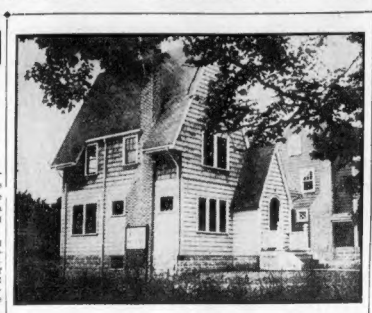
The J. C. McLean & Son Company of Watertown and Somerville are responsible for the complete furniture installation at the house. The furniture throughout is in strictest harmony, both in relation to color schemes and cost.

The living room, in addition to rug, pictures, etc., contains a four-piece, three-toned Jacquard set, lamps, book rack and tables. A grey reed set of divan, rocker, arm chair and table, together with radio and accessories make the sun room both attractive and cozy. The dining room is furnished with a nine-piece American walnut set that blends perfectly with the finely grained gumwood finish of doors, pantry and windows.

One of the bedrooms contains an ivory set of period design, another a walnut set, and the third bedroom is fitted up as a nursery with furniture that makes an ideal children's room.

The lighting fixtures in the room are supplied by the Star Lighting Fixture Company, each unit selected with idea of making the home perfectly equipped electrically.

This Warrendale home, distinctive and with a great deal of character is made more beautiful by the landscaping and planting work laid out by the Waltham Nurseries.



The Beauty of Old English is shown in the adaption to modern needs of this gabled home. (At Right) Arthur H. Whitcomb, builder of this and other distinctive homes.

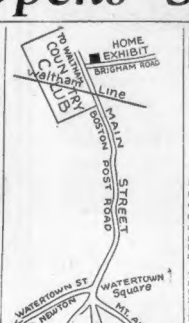
BUILDERS OF BETTER HOMES FOR 35 YEARS



CONTRACTORS FEATURE UTILITY

Visitors to the Warrendale Home Exhibit will find much information regarding materials and equipment of homes available. A primary desire of the prospective buyer is usually the question of financing. So many homes have been financed through co-operative banks that the system has been greatly simplified.

Suppose you need $5,000. You would subscribe to 25 shares, each share equal in value to $200. On these shares you would pay $1 per month on each share, or $25 per month, plus interest on the loan, at 6 per cent, which would be $300 per year, or $25 per month, a total of $50 per month. The $25 you pay each month on the shares constitute what is known as a sinking fund and can be used to liquidate the amount of the principal. Upon this money is drawn over your account with interest, so that at the end of about 12 years the money that you have paid back, $3,600, plus the interest, added by us, amounts to the $5,000 you borrowed and the loan becomes cancelled, or the shares become fully paid up, and you have no more payments to make, either on the shares or for interest.

The Seasonable Rains Store is responsible for the draperies in the home.

Electrical installations were made by Raymond Murphy, who has been associated in this way with the builder, Mr. Whitcomb, on most of his houses.

The tile work in the bathroom of the home exhibit was installed by the Watertown Tile Company, while complete plumbing and heating work was done by R. F. Norwood of Cambridge.

The Webster Lumber Company supplies all of the rough lumber, hardwood flooring and roofing.

Particularly interesting is the Phoenix Oil Burner, which will be shown in operation.

The millwork are from the stocks of B. A. Cook of Fitchburg. Mass., and all mason work is by J. A. Davini of Waltham.

WHAT MODEL HOME CONTAINS

Living room, dining room, sun room, kitchen, two bedrooms, nursery, laundry, bathroom, washroom, lavatory, linen closet china pantry, three kitchen cabinets, six closets and storage room are included in the floor plans of the Warrendale home.

A Story of Sylvia Bryant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, a rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd proposes that Mrs. Ackerman engage Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, a beautiful and charming young girl, as her social secretary. Mrs. Ackerman agrees and Ladd summons Sylvia.

Sylvia finally consents and her father and mother are very much pleased.

Ackerman calls for her, introduces her to Margot Liggett and takes her to his home.

There she meets Stuart Gifford, a cousin of Ackerman's, who offers to escort her home. Near her door they find Jimmy Devlin, an admirer of Sylvia, waiting for her.

After Gifford goes, Jimmy rails against the rich and Sylvia sends him away. Ackerman takes Sylvia to the theatre. At a night club they see Margot Liggett. Margot's former husband appears.

CHAPTER 11.

SYLVIA'S heart jerked violently; there was a sharp catching of breath in her throat.

Someone, in the dead of night, was knocking at her door.

The next instant she smiled at her own startled excitement. It was, of course, Mrs. Ackerman. Her big head, naturally, had told her of the shock of fright they had received about the poisoning and Joyce had come to her room. . . .

Putting down her hairbrush, Sylvia crossed the room, unlocked the door and opened it.

In a striped silk bathrobe stood Stuart Gifford.

Her face went white, then red. He was looking at her with a strange, adventurous expression in his eyes.

"I heard you come in—I couldn't sleep and I thought maybe you mightn't mind a little chat. I'm dismally restless tonight—I wanted to see you so badly I couldn't wait until tomorrow. After you went out with Vance I was like a caged lion—"

His voice was hushed, confidential. Seeing him thus, so intimately, Sylvia was numbed, deprived, momentarily, of speech. Hastily she clutched her own robe more tightly about her.

"Why—you look positively frightened," he said, smiling into her eyes. "What's the trouble? Scared?"

Sylvia was frightened—but at herself. There was a queer terror in the strange radiation she was feeling, the fact that she was not embarrassed by the indiscreet situation. All of her training told her she should be furious and insulted—yet she was not, actually, angry. But the conventions were too deeply ingrained in her to permit the reception of a man—a suitor—into her room in the middle of the night. . . . and both of them in negligee.

"It's perfectly all right," he assured her. "I haven't made any noise—no one knows I'm calling. He lounged against the doorway. "Let me come in and smoke a cigarette—you won't be compromised. I assure you. I don't look very violent, do I?"

The truth was that Sylvia felt en

Dolores Costello declared every friend she has in the movies has either a tennis court, a swimming pool or some other means of outdoor exercise.

SERVICE TO HUB TO BE SPEEDY

Parade Marks Last Step in Big Improvements Being Made by the Road

Preceded by a parade and a luncheon attended by prominent men from all parts of the country, the Boston & Maine's new fruit and vegetable auction terminal on Rutherford avenue was formally turned over to the trade by President George Hannauer today.

Representatives of State and city sat at the head table, and, although Governor Fuller was not present, a message of congratulation from him was read by Charles P. Howard, State director of finance.

The occasion marked the latest step in the B. & M.'s $5,000,000 Boston terminal improvement program, and announcement was made that the railroad had arranged to operate fruit trains on new, fast schedules.

DEMONSTRATES SPEED.

The parade started in Dock square and headed by Fieldings' First Corps Cadet Band proceeded in motor coaches and automobiles to the new terminal over a direct route which demonstrated the rapidity with

PRINCE DANCES SWEET HOURS' WITH ACTRESS

Ottawa, Aug. 5 (I.N.S.).—As the Prince of Wales left for Brockville today on a yachting trip through the Thousands Islands, he carried with him memories of a demure, pretty actress with whom he danced until early today at the Country Club.

Valerie Elmer-Jones is her name and only a few months ago she was charming Broadway with her beauty.

Miss Elmer-Jones, an accomplished amateur actress, is a member of one of Ottawa's oldest families. Some months ago she took part in a Broadway production, but soon tired of a theatrical career and returned to take her rightful spot in Ottawa's society life.

Last night the actress, in her flame-red costume, was the envy of the elite society belles as the Prince claimed her for one dance after another.

With the Prince of Wales on the special train which left for Brockville today were his brother, Prince George, Premier Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin. On arrival at Brockville there will be a round of golf, lunch with Mrs. George Fuller and a trip through the Thousand Islands on Mrs. Fuller's yacht to Kingston, where the royal party will entrain for Toronto.

10 AUTOISTS ARE FINED IN QUINCY CRUSADE

Quincy police have declared war on speeding autoists on the new Southern Artery between Quincy avenue and South street, Quincy Point. As a result about a dozen motorists were in Quincy District Court today and were fined $10 each for speeding.

PROUT FUNERAL IS ANNOUNCED FOR TUESDAY

Funeral services for William C. Proul, supreme director of the Knights of Columbus, will be conducted at St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay, at 10 o'clock on Tuesday, when a solemn requiem mass will be sung.

Telegrams of sympathy from all parts of the order who have been in convention at Portland, Ore., have been received by Mrs. Proul. State Deputy John E. Swift, who is with the Massachusetts delegation in the West, wired from Spokane that he and other members of the delegation have cancelled the remainder of their trip and would arrive in Boston Tuesday at 8 a. m. and participate in the obsequies.

A special meeting of Bishop Cheverus Assembly, K. of C., has been called at Ross Croix Hall, Dudley and Warren streets, Roxbury, for 2 o'clock Sunday to take action on Mr. Proul's death.

It is expected members of the assembly will attend the funeral in uniform. Back Bay Council, of which Mr. Proul was a member, also will attend.

MAN SERIOUSLY HURT AS HORSE BOLTS IN ALLSTON

Chester Copperthorne, 28, of Summer street, Somerville, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, today, suffering from injuries sustained when thrown from his wagon at Cambridge and Mansfield streets, Allston.

Becoming frightened at Cambridge street and Harvard avenue Copperthorne's horse bolted. He raced between a mail box and a post. The driver was thrown out, and at the hospital was found to be suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and fractured right shoulder.

'We're Not Drug Store Beauties,' Cry Stars

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 5 (A.P.)—A declaration by Mrs. Mabelle De Witt, Hollywood beauty parlor proprietor, at a national meeting of cosmeticians at Chicago, that motion picture actresses did their youth preserving in beauty shops instead of through athletics, today brought vigorous protests from film stars.

Mrs. DeWitt said stories about actresses indulging in rowing, swimming and other exercise were "bush."

"Why," said Greta Garbo, one of those mentioned by Mrs. DeWitt, "I have not missed the daily exercise which I was taught in Sweden since I came to Hollywood. Of course, I visit beauty shops occasionally, but that hasn't anything to do with physical exercising."

Renee Adoree, also cited by Mrs. DeWitt, declared she did her share of outdoor work, "not because it is necessary, but because I love all outdoor sports."

Dolores Costello said she hadn't a friend in the motion picture colony but who boasted a swimming pool, tennis court or some means of outdoor exercise. "They are all in constant use, too," she declared.

All of the actresses called attention to the pledges made by picture workers in the agreement recently attained by producers by which a proposed wage cut was abandoned, providing that all employes kept physically fit.

Here's a Judge Who Knows His Onions!

Charged with having "a strong breath" while operating an automobile, James Pappacorge of North Cambridge, in East Cambridge District Court today admitted it, but declared it was from garlic and onions.

Judge Edward A. Counihan, Jr., found the defendant not guilty of operating under the influence of liquor.

ASK $75,000 IN 2 LOVE SUITS

Fannie Blaustein today brought a $50,000 suit for alienation of affections against Mary Kopelman in Suffolk Superior Court. She alleged the affections of her husband, Alfred Blaustein, were alienated.

In the same court Harry Kling, Boston traffic policeman, brought suit for $10,000 against Harry G. Lawson of No. 1517 Beacon street, Brookline, for injuries sustained April 21 when the traffic stand in Governor's square was knocked over by Lawson's car.

A suit for $25,000 for alleged breach of promise was brought by Edna C. Smith against Isaac Stromberg of Brookline.

TWO WOMEN INJURED IN NORTH GRAFTON CRASH

North Grafton, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—A car operated by John R. Pike, of Rochester, N. Y., with Mrs. Pike and Miss Sarah E. Lavin of Roxbury, Mass., as passengers, crashed into a bakeshop front today after sideswiping two automobiles. One of Mrs. Pike's arms was fractured and Miss Lavin is believed to have a broken hip.

The injured women were sent to a hospital in Worcester. Mr. Pike lost control of the car.

COUSINS FIGHT OVER WILL OF EMMA BORDEN

Providence, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—Opposition to allowance of the will of Emma T. Borden of Fall River, disposing of a half million dollar estate, materialized in the Bristol probate court today when Hardy, Burdine & Burgess of Galesburg, Ill., entered appearance for two first cousins of the Borden family, Eva Roe and Mary B. Fairchild, who will contest the document.

James C. Collins of this city, counsel for the administrators of the estate, said he knew nothing more of the matter than the entering of the appearances and that the hearing on the will in Bristol has been postponed.

Preston H. Gardner of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company, administrator and trustee of the estate, explained the relationship of the Illinois women who will oppose the will, but said it did not know what their course will be.

No provision was made for the two women, according to the terms of the will which was made public last June. Of the half-million dollars, several hundred thousands was left to various charities and the residue of the estate was split up among certain beneficiaries.

Emma T. Borden was the sister of Lizbeth (Lizzie) Borden, who figured as the principal in one of the most famous murder cases in this country. Emma died in June, just ten days after the death of Lizzie. The latter left an estate valued at about $250,000.

$10,000,000 Hotel for N. Y.

New York, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—Plans for erection of a $10,000,000 hotel opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Seventh avenue and Thirty-first street have been announced by R. F. Brooks, investment broker. The hotel will be 27 stories, with 1,250 rooms and bath.

RECEPTION TONIGHT FOR DUKE ELLINGTON

A reception will be tendered Duke Ellington, noted band leader, at the Scenic Auditorium, Berkeley street, tonight. Bobby Sawyer will be master of ceremonies. Stage celebrities from the various Boston theatres will furnish entertainment during the evening and Duke Ellington's band will furnish music.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 3. South is not deceived by West's false-card of the ten of Diamonds, knowing that North, if holding both the six and four of Diamonds, would have followed the Ace with the six instead of with the four. In order to force his partner to trump and drive out one of East's smart honors, South leads a low Diamond. His plan succeeding, a trump trick is established in South's hand, giving him the needed fourth trick to save the game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

The Three Musketeers — By Alexandre Dumas

© 1927, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved

D'Artagnan's "Man of Meung" had visited Milady de Winter with orders from the Cardinal. She had given him the paper on which was written "Armentieres," the name of the town where he was to meet her. Milady had told Constance that the man meant to arrest her, and persuaded the frightened girl to run away with her.

The two young women were about to flee when they heard the thundering of hoofs outside. Thinking it was the Cardinal's Guards, Constance was so terrified that she could not run. Milady offered her some wine, which Constance drank to restore her strength. Then Milady left her and ran from the convent alone.

The door burst open—it was d'Artagnan and his friends. Constance uttered a cry of joy, and then died in his arms. Milady had poisoned the beautiful girl rather than leave her to d'Artagnan. The heart-broken young man fell senseless beside her body. At this moment Lord de Winter reached the convent.

He had pursued Milady from England to arrange the death of Buckingham. He swore vengeance with the four Musketeers beside the body of Constance. Suddenly realising the significance of the word "Armentieres" in the note, the five men set out in pursuit of Milady.

AMERICAN SHOT BY YAQUIS IN MEXICO

Washington, Aug. 5 (I.N.S.).—Joe A. Kendrick, an American employed by the Guadaloupe Mining Company of Texas, was shot on July 31 in an encounter with Yaqui Indians, H. S. Burley, American consul at Guaymas, Mexico, reported to the State Department today.

Kendrick was wounded in the knee. His condition is not serious. One Mexican was killed in the clash, which occurred five miles from Tecoripa.

NEW ENGLAND LEADER IN LIGHTING

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

There are those who try to tell us sun shines the brightest, etc., outside of New England. There are others who accuse us of being too hefty. To the one we may reply that at least the nights are brightest in New England and to the other that he parsimony is indicated in our per capita electric lighting bills. The average annual electric light bill in New England is $30.04, compared with the national average of $24.34. In the Rocky Mountains the average is $24.66. New Yorkers are popularly supposed to be very free with the currency of the realm, but the average lighting bill in that section is $29.26.

No "profitless prosperity" is to be found in the first quarter record of the American Ice Company, which has just been announced. The net earnings were the largest in the history of the company, coal ended in the frigid three months. Charles C. Small, president of American Ice Company, has branches in different sections of these north eastern states. He is a New Englander. He was born in Hancock-sunkport, Me., back in 1876. His first school at 14 and started his business career as clerk in a general store in the Pine Tree State.

United Shoe, when it sold at 86½ shares yesterday, set a new high for the year. The floating supply of "Shoe" on the Boston Stock Exchange has been very small for months past, and those desirous of buying it have been compelled to go and get it at steadily rising prices. Sidney W. Winslow, Jr., of Brookline became president of the big company in 1925. Former president, Edwin F. Brown, at the same time became chairman of the board of directors. State Street has been flooded with rumors of a new invention under United Shoe auspices that would cut shoe production materially. Nothing official has been uttered.

Pay advances on the railroads appear to be the order of the day, time bitterly fought. Despite these advances of the nation's carriers have risen what in many cases are unprecedented levels. The latest decision is that of the Board of Mediation, of which Wallace W. Ranger is chairman, provides a 7½ per cent. wage increase for about 20,000 locomotive engineers on 54 Eastern railroads, just half what the engineers asked for. Annual payrolls of the affected roads are boosted about $6,500,000 by the addition, but brokers continue to predict we are on the verge of the greatest railroad market of all time, and career minded men are being eagerly sought for the "strong box."

There is some discussion in railroad circles' as to whether or not Er. Hanger looks younger without his moustache. Popularly Gillette interests are supposed to be wearing a moustache and beards, but the fact is that numerous directors continue to wear beards, somewhat after the fashion of the days when the great Emancipator ruled in Washington and the "Father Abraham" was still addressed as Madame President."

'ANADIUM earned $2.94 a share in first half-year against $2.76 in like 1926 period.

JAQUES CUP FAVORITES SURVIVE

O'Connell Wins a Thrilling Match for His Team on the 22d Hole With a Birdie

No More Waiting for Harvard Football Tickets

Improvements being made in the offices of the Harvard Athletic Association in Cambridge in the next two weeks will more than double the space which has been available heretofore, and will make the long wait for football tickets a thing of the past.

For the more important grid iron contests on the Harvard schedule, there has been invariably a long line of ticket applicants, making it necessary in some cases to wait for over an hour for the desired postcards. The Crimson ethically has demanded an improvement of this condition, and the present enlargement of the athletic offices is the result of an insistent demand during the past few years.

CARRIGAN LOOKS FOR CLEAN-UP

Red Sox Manager Will Shoot Another Right-Hander at White Sox Today

The surge is on. The Red Sox have struck that winning dash that Bill Carrigan has been reaching for all season. A couple of wins over the Chicago White Sox by 2 to 1 scores is sufficient proof that Carrigan is not only getting good pitching but his defence has tightened up and the old Carrigan game of one run on hit ball has begun to assert itself.

Miss Helen Jacobs Meets Mrs. Mallory in Women's Final

Seabright, N. J., Aug. 5.—Those two doughty tennis warriors, William T. Tilden, 2nd, and Francis T. Hunter, recently returned from conducting an extensive European court invasion for Uncle Sam, will fight it out in the Seabright men's singles finals today.

In the women's finals, Mrs. Molla Mallory, who has been national champion on and off since Hector was a pup, will attempt to regain some of the prestige lost by her defeat two weeks ago by youthful Helen Jacobs, baby member of the California Helens, Wills and Jacobs.

Mrs Mallory and Miss Jacobs both won their semifinal matches in straight sets and will clash in the womens finals.

Tilden who apparently has had enough of clowning since that court burlesque at Wimbledon, in which he lost to Cochet, after being within a few strokes of victory, was in a grim mood. Serving and driving mercilessly, the former champion battered down the opposition of young George Lott, of Chicago, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4.

Hunter was forced into extra sets to subdue youthful Percy Norris, former Lehigh University star. The Olympic and Wimbledon doubles champion, who has a terrific service-forehand drive to rely on, won 7—5, 4—6, 6—2 victory.

Paying the method of machine-like game which has been model directly upon that of Helen Wood, Helen Jacobs gave stout-souled Miss Eleanor Goss, third ranking player in the women's division.

This astounding miss from the coast treated America's third best player as if she might have been a beginner and unconcernedly ran out a 6—2, 6—2 victory. Mrs Mallory, her backhanding backhands carrying their power and accuracy to the very accuracy, allowed Miss A. H. Chapin, Jr., of Hyannis, Mass. but three games winning 6—2, 6—0.

H. Norris Williams and Lewis N. White, Texas, the newly formed doubles combination, reach the finals and watch a swift battle over the East-West combination when W. Innes, formerly of Yale and John Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., emerge victors 6—2, 6—3.

Williams, the old Notre Dame warrior, tried to time all to get a rest but to lead the more compact all doubles combination, and it became of championship calibre.

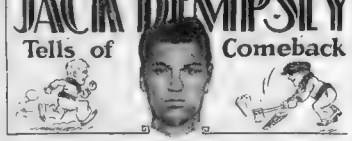
JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback



Dempsey Answers Criticism That His Sparring Partners Are a "Lot of Bums"

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THERE'S an old saying in the ring game that "a fighter is known by the sparring partners he keeps."

I think the idea is all covered with moss and ought to be carried away somewhere and buried.

For time, which has changed about everything else, also has changed the sparring partner thing.

Very often the old timers tell me of the great sparrers that John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Jeffries used to have; they talk about them and then tell me that:

"You're a sap to get little guys like that to work with you. You ought to get a lot of large guys to work with you. That's the way we used to do it."

I grabbed one of those old-time guys by the throat the other day and said to him:

"If I want to earn a couple of thousand dollars next week I'll need a sparring partner like you with me, and I'm not going to get him."

I asked him why and he said:

"Why, you fellows figure that the more you hurt us the better it is for you. In the old days there were many fighters who would not work with you unless you agreed to let them hurt you. Some of the greatest fighters of the game, in fact, were those who would not work with you unless you agreed to let them hurt you. I was paid only $5 a week for working with a champion."

"NATURALLY, when a champion was training for a fight, he always could get plenty of those fellows. They were glad to work for him for steady wages and board, for they knew they would get better pay than they made by grabbing off a fight or two every three or four months and getting one or $100 or $200 for taking an awful beating.

"But it's all different now—and you fellows just don't get the point. I realize quite well by now why you want a good sparring partner in training with you. It helps me when I'm getting set for a fight. I'm offered a lot to knock out a lot of bum heavyweights in the preliminaries before I come on with the main event. I'm offered them bigger purses than any other heavyweight ever fought before. But I won't get on.

"They just pass me by—that is most of them do. For they tell me that they can make from three to ten times as much money as I can get from by doing just one fight—so there you are. The men who would make good sparring partners—[illegible] kind of men I need—can't be landed unless I pay the group of them about all the money that I get out of that fight myself.

"AND I can't blame them. Why should they take a daily beating around for from $200 to $1,000 a week, when they can go out to some lick town fight every week, get from $1,500 to $2,500 for the work and then get a shot in a big town and draw down any where from $5,000 to $15,000?

"I wish I never went away from home trying to get me a few good sparring partners like Sharkey and those fellows had." He sat back set. And he won't come back—not with sparring partners of the kind he tells me the champions of long ago used to have around their camps.

And so I've got to do just like all the others in this generation do—get along as best I can with the best possible men I can get under the circumstances. But I can't do any good work. It's been mighty lucky.

Through the years a lot of young stars have come into my camp to work out with me, and I've developed some mighty good prospects in the group.

Those fellows gave me good work, developed and went on. And if one of my staff ever goes wrong, has been a victim of [illegible] like Marty Burke and Tex Hemming, because of their friendship for me, come to my camp and work out with me even at a sacrifice to themselves in their business.

GENE TUNNEY World's Heavyweight Champion

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CONFIDENCE is the something that lifts men to the heights. Over-confidence usually topples them to ruin.

I cannot ever think of the Dempsy-Sharkey fight without believing that the over-confidence of Sharkey wrecked whatever chance he had.

It filled the Sharkey admirers with wild delight in the first round when Sharkey drove home some solid smashes to Dempsey's chin. They staggered the ex-champion and put him in a bad way. Yet it seems to me that the punching success of Sharkey in that minute or so of fighting, defeated him.

Sharkey went into the battle presumably with orders to box Dempsey and not try to mix it down and then, if possible, to go out and finish him.

And shortly, he was instructed not to try to slug it with the veteran slugger. Perhaps Sharkey never would have made that effort if it had not been for those punches which he landed on Dempsey's chin in the first round.

BUT when he had Dempsey shaky, he got the idea into his head that he could outslug Dempsey, that he had nothing to fear from Dempsey's punches. Undoubtedly that he had nothing to himself took the form of fatal overconfidence. He wanted to show to the crowd that he could outslug a great slugger and knock him out.

Sharkey cast much of the science and skill he possessed to the four winds and went out trying to beat Dempsey down and out in spectacular fashion.

And he went along to his futile doom.

For he was meeting Dempsey at Dempsey's own game—and he was not equal to it. In every slugging rally, Dempsey had the better of it. Sharkey should have learned that he was making a mistake; he then should have gone back to strictly boxing tactics. But he was still unconvinced and he kept on playing right into Dempsey's hands.

SHARKEY perhaps realized his error—when it was too late. For along in the fourth round, Dempsey's body punching had made a visible impression upon Sharkey. Those blows to the stomach were taking some of the speed out of Sharkey's legs and he began to show a bit of weariness.

It was too late then for Sharkey to resort to speed, because he had lost so much of it that he was no longer Dempsey's superior in that department.

Dempsey certainly seemed faster than Sharkey after the fifth round began. And so Sharkey had to keep right on doing what he had been doing—slugging it.

His finish was inevitable.

BOL D'OR NEXT REVERE RACE

An array of racing which will bring to the Revere oval the greatest galaxy of gear grinders ever to assemble there at one time will appear there tomorrow night.

Seven paced anklers will compete for the Bol d' Or trophy. George Chapman, Francesco Zucchetti, Frankie Keenan, Charles Verkeyn, Dan Pietone, Vincent Madonna, and Charles Jaeger are the motor chasers selected to start.

Three sprinters will compete in a special three-heat race; Al Grenda the lanky Australian; Charles Winter, the flashy Newark star, and Bill Heniberg.

An event which is listed as a pursuit race should provide the beach fans with plenty of amusement. Hardy Jackson, the demon longboard at Revere, will race Joe Turgeon, the old timer.

Diet Helps for Those Trying to Reduce

By MARTHA LEE

"If you want to reduce your weight," began a lady the other day to a not-pleased to be plump friend—who interrupted—"IF I want to! Show me any one on the green footstool who is five pounds overweight who DOESN'T want to!"

Not only is overweight distressingly unfashionable, but it is truly dangerous as one frequently hears emphasized by medical writers. Statistics of life insurance companies show that a man fifty years old who is fifty pounds overweight has only about half the chance of living his life as a man of the same age who is of normal weight. And so from the danger to health, a fat person is less comfortable at less effort than he would be if he were rid of his burden of flesh.

To reduce a FEW pounds means almost no discomfort, but to remove fifty pounds requires a strong character, fortitude and patience. If you are much overweight, the sooner you undertake to reduce, the better.

The two most common causes of overweight are over eating and lack of exercise. The best way to avoid putting fat is to eat the smallest amount of food for one's habits and conditions of life.

If you have accumulated a few pounds over your normal weight and want to reduce, eat less and exercise more. People of sedentary habits, who consume no more calories, seems too few because they constantly eat more food than they need.

Few of us realize that the body must do something with every bite of food we put into it. The amount of food a person needs depends on how much work that person does. But often the amount he eats is determined by the amount which is put on the table before him.

There is nothing the body can do with excess food except lay it aside as fat. Persons who eat much and rest much generally grow fat. Many thin persons, on the other hand, eat liberally but are active in their movements and burn up so much energy that they have difficulty in digesting enough to keep them in good condition.

There are a very few people, fat or thin, who are suffering from disease. These persons put that, put themselves under the care of a physician.

Here are two tables of "To Eat" and "Not to Eat."

You may eat these—beef bouillon broth, broiled or stuffed meats, cream soups made with skimmed milk, cooked cereals, wheat cereals, rice cereals, corn cereals, chicken soup, tomato consommé, eggs in any form except fried, fruit salads with fruit dressings, gluten bread, lean meats, no chicken, roast beef, salmon (canned in water), buttermilk, clam broth, consommé, Irish moss, lettuce and tomato salad, mineral waters, oatmeal, orange juice, peaches (canned in water), pineapple (canned in water), plain gelatine dessert, poached eggs, raw fruits, spinach, tomato soup, vegetable salads, vegetables (except those forbidden), weak tea, whole wheat bread, zwieback.

You may not eat these—beer, cocoa, cream soups, fat meats, fried foods, gravies, hot breads, ice cream, pastries, sugar, sweet chocolate, sweet cocoa, sweet desserts, sweet fruits, sweet puddings, sweets of all kinds, whipped cream, whole milk, yeast breads.

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

CHAPTER XLV.

MR. HOPE came into The Miscellany one June morning six months later, very pleased with life, rubbing his hands.

Jill had not left him or got married, after all. Trade was excellent. It had never been better. And Lord Sealy, who was disposing of an important country seat, lock, stock and barrel, to a rich American, had put the whole of the valuation in his hands. Hope did a lot in valuations these days, especially now that he could confidently leave his whole antique business in Jill's [illegible]

"Good morning my dear. Any letters for me?" he asked.

"Yes, there are. Mr. Hope, I owe to your kind assistance. Let me tell Pearl [illegible] Carlo and Louise's and I've entered a [illegible] There were [illegible] Carlo, Mr. Hope, he said, I've just finished engaging a [illegible] Spanish [illegible] Mr. Hope, we have much on a Saturday do we?"

Hope sat down in the big chair before his special [illegible] Chippendale affair, very well [illegible] stamped from the purely utilitarian by the [illegible] ornamentation [illegible] a master hand.

"Why I laughed, my dear?" he asked. "It's good to mock off sometimes. I [illegible] Saturday's post. That reminds me why I'm wanting a holiday is that I haven't had one since we came to me. You shouldn't work too hard, you know. How about July—three weeks [illegible] the beginning of next month?"

"That would suit me beautifully," answered Jill. "I shall be able to help my brother and his wife move into their cottage in Kent."

"Oh, so they're back in England. Aren't they returning to the States?"

"No. He's bought a small farm and a lovely little Elizabethan Manor House, and they're going to bury themselves in the country. They've ever so happy and contented."

"That's right," Hope nodded approvingly. "I like to hear of young couples settling down in a homely and [illegible] sensible way. Good for Lucky Jim, I say," he cried. "One of these days you'll be [illegible] the same thing yourself [illegible] the circle and the right man. I don't mind telling you now, my dear, that I was quite disturbed when you told me you were engaged to Derek Craig, and I was more than relieved when it was [illegible] I can't see that you had any lasting affection."

"We hadn't," said Jill. "He's going to be out [illegible] next week to Lady Betty Balcairn. I saw it in the [illegible] column."

"Is he?" Carley's matrimonial arrangements did not greatly interest the old man, or Jill either, for that matter. "Talking of the papers," he went on, "have you looked in to see what [illegible] if my valuation [illegible]?"

"Not yet. I will now."

Jill picked up the Daily Mail, unfolded and opened it.

Jill Swayed and Then Slid Off Her Chair

"Yes, here it is," she said, and handed the paper to Hope.

He glanced at his own advertisement, and then cursorily turned to scanning the current news topics.

A headline in leaded type caught his eye and drew a sudden exclamation from him.

"Great heavens!" he ejaculated. "How—shocking! What an appalling affair! Lady Meldreth! Why I saw her in Regent street the day before yesterday, getting out of a car with a very dashing young fellow! Well, well! And now she's dead! Done to death! Dear me, dear me!"

"Dead!" echoed Jill incredulously. "Lady Meldreth! Surely—you're making a mistake!"

"I'm afraid not . . . there seems no doubt about it. Here you are—'Shocking Tragedy.' Too column. It doesn't say m . . . she was found shot through the heart . . . Must have been dead some hours . . . Have they arrested anyone? I didn't quite finish the paragraph."

Jill had [illegible] paper. Her face was the [illegible] as the news [illegible] Her hands shook.

"Yes . . . they have the man . . . a Polish violinist called Barmski, in whom the deceased possessed a [illegible] interest."

"Hmmm!" Hope cleared his throat. "That's as may be. . . . Anyway, it's a terrible end! I don't suppose the whole truth will ever come out. It's to be hoped it doesn't, for anybody's sake. She wasn't an exemplary woman, understand—a somewhat reckless lady. Does it say anything about his lordship's whereabouts?"

The lines of print seemed to dance before Jill's eyes, then cleared and stood out once more.

"It says, 'Lord Meldreth, who was abroad at the time, arrived in London [illegible] on hearing the tragic news.' "

She hardly recognized her own voice.

"Nothing else?" asked Hope.

"No, nothing else."

"Well, it can't very well put, the wife poisoned with great" Hope remarked [illegible] while sense would stop short of that, but he had to be shocked but not [illegible] . . . She treated him [illegible] . . . The whole world knows that. She put him through it to one way and another for fourteen [illegible] years. . . . Only when the war was on I guessed how things were. He came in to this shop and we had a talk like we often do, and he shook hands, saying goodbye. He told me then he hoped he wouldn't come back . . . He didn't intend to if he could help it. He was on the thick of it, too. First in France and then in Mesopotamia during [illegible] all the time, but it wasn't to be. I left him afterwards that he ought to take it for granted that life must have some great purpose in store for him one day. At any rate, and though it is and dreadful to think of, for no one likes to hear of [illegible] murdered, it will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

DAILY SHORT STORY

TOO MUCH EARNESTNESS

By Eudora Ramsay Richardson

THE shaded sconce and the gold and black floor lamp cast a [illegible] while Beryl and Betty were engaged in the [illegible] read for the first time the list of manifestations of sex in infancy, she covered her face with her hands and shuddered. Betty put herself to sleep sucking a soft little thumb.

That night Beryl rudely applied turpentine to Betty's offending member, while baby screamed. Later Brent was speaking in the living room when Betty screamed. He walked to the end [illegible] "What made you do that?"

"I'm keeping her thumbs out of her mouth with nipoline."

"And what book said to do that, may I ask?"

"Please don't be ignorant. Thumb sucking is a sex manifestation."

"Well, I'd hate to have a sexless child," Brent laughed.

The tempest above had by this time reached so great a magnitude that the father offered to go up to the rescue.

"If you won't wipe the quinine off, I'll spank it," Beryl proceeded.

"All right," came the reluctant response, and Brent departed.

Fifteen minutes later when the elder B's were at dinner, floating on a calm all the more delightful because of the intensity of the storm now abated, Beryl asked timidly, "How did you do it?"

"Suggested the use of the forefinger," he replied.

A few nights afterward Beryl got hold of a book on the subconscious mind. Alone in the house, while Brent attended some sort of meeting, she devoured the chapter on "Character Building During Sleep." According to the writer any objectional habit or trait might be cured by suggestion while sleep held the child's conscious mind. Beryl read the chapter again and again. She could follow those directions. Indeed, with Brent away, what better time would there be than the present?

Tremping Beryl went to Betty's room. By the red light she could see the two involved little [illegible] asleep in her decorated bed. Beryl swallowed hard and then screwed up to herself the directions she had just read and advanced toward the bed arms outstretched. Twice she paused her hands over Betty. The third time the hands fluttered from Betty's curls to the pyramid that marked her toes, the baby stirred. Easing her out, Beryl proceeded.

"Darling, this is only mother. Tomorrow Betty is going to eat. Tomorrow Betty is going to eat."

Six times Beryl intoned the chant. Then she tried to say with conviction, "Betty will not remember this." When told that he will not remember," the book had said, "the child is rendered incapable of remembering."

Turning, Beryl faced Brent, who from the doorway had been a silent witness. Brent leaned against the wall and laughed. Outraged, Beryl wept and, still more outraged she found herself powerless to escape Brent's proffered shoulder.

The next morning at breakfast, the baby regarded her mother with uncanny maturity.

"Muvver," she reproved. "You wuxe Betty last night—sev Betty mus' eat. Betty ain't donna eat doan wanna eat."

Matters afterwards progressed steadily from bad to worse, mother and child both losing weight. Then one night Beryl had a dream. Monsters, with Starvation and Death in the lead, were pursuing her offspring. She jumped from the bed, plunged blindly through the darkness, and awoke to find Brent holding her. Brent switched on the light and looked searchingly into his wife's face. Then he led her to the bath room scales.

"You're going away tomorrow," he announced with finality in his voice. "One hundred and five pounds, and you used to weigh a hundred and twenty."

Despite her protests, Beryl left next day, Brent having made all the plans that concerned both Beryl and Betty.

A month later the exiled wife was allowed to return.

"How's Betty?" she asked, as she jumped from the train.

"Fine as a fiddle."

"Does she eat?"

"She's a day laborer."

"Who's now taking care of her?"

"Lena."

"Oh, Brent, you didn't trust her to that ignorant Lena! I never could get her the least concerned about Betty's condition."

"Friendly indifference is what Betty needed," Brent replied. "Besides, Lena did know your routine."

Just then the car turned into the garden where Betty stood clapping her dimpled hands. She was as round and rosy as the babies that advertise certain well known foods. Beryl gathered the little elf in her arms while the phlegmatic Lena smiled almost humanly.

After dinner, Brent and Beryl were again alone in the living room.

"It's good to have you back looking so young and pretty," he said, rumpling his hair as he spoke.

"But I'm so useless." Beryl sighed wistfully.

"Don't you believe it." Brent countered. "I've been awfully busy trying to remember all the things you do for Betty. You've been right—only a little too earnest."

"I just didn't know quite enough," Beryl smiled.

Brent laughed as he kissed her, and Beryl was rather too happy for speech.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

MILLIONS of people who struggled all Winter to get warm are now doing everything they can think of to keep cool.

ONE guy built a fire in his furnace yesterday morning so that he could have the pleasure of letting it go out.

THE weather is so hot that he has to carry ice in the pockets of his raccoon coat.

HE took his knickerbockers to a pawnshop and had them equipped with electrical refrigeration.

HE married a three hundred pound girl so that he could have some shade.

HE makes her stand on the lawn while he sits in her shadow.

THE first day he brought her home, the people next door thought there was an eclipse.

HIS house is so warm that the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals made him take the Polar bear from out of the parlor.

HE'S a Scotchman and makes his own ice. He works up a perspiration and then stands in front of an electric fan.

HE doesn't run the fan very often. He usually keeps cool by reading ghost stories.

HE claims there are more shivers in a dime novel than there are in two gallons of ice cream.

EVERY time he goes to a drug store and buys a soda, he puts a thermometer in the glass.

HE'S suspicious of the clerks. He thinks they're cheating him by degrees.

HE always starts the day off right by getting up in the morning and reading last January's weather reports.

HE takes the Christmas tree ornaments out of the closet and sprinkles the artificial snow on the front lawn.

THE last time he did it, the stuff looked so real that all the flowers got frost-bitten.

IT'S wonderful to have a few hot days, but they usually come at the time of the year when we don't need them.

Famous Composers

FROM violinist in a street band to a position as the idol of the Viennese people! Such was the life story of Franz Joseph Haydn. Born at Rohrau, Austria, on March 31, 1732, of humble parentage, "Baby Joseph" as he was fondly called, showed early in life the glimmerings of the genius that has made him beloved throughout the world.

When but six years of age, little Joseph sang in the choir of the village church and it was here that the remarkable beauty of the child's voice attracted the attention of the Kapellmeister of the Cathedral of Vienna. He took the boy to Vienna to study music in the Imperial Choir. Young Haydn spent ten years studying in Vienna, where he learned to play the violin and harpsichord. Here, also, he learned the first rules of composition.

On his dismissal from the choir owing to a boyish, mischievous prank, Haydn played the violin in a street band, until he had sufficient money to rent a garret. With some friends who lived in the same house he formed a small orchestra, and determining to attract the attention of the leader of the opera, Haydn composed a serenade which they played one night under the crusty old man's window. Attracted by the beauty of the serenade, the old man called from the window, demanding to know the name of the composer. This was the turning point of Haydn's career. His rise from that time reads like a fairy tale.

About this time, Haydn fell in love with the daughter of a wigmaker of Vienna. However, the young lady decided to enter the convent, and Haydn in despair married her older sister. Instead of being an inspiration and help to Haydn, his wife seemed to do everything in her power to make life miserable, even to the extent of using his valued manuscripts as curl papers.

In the same year in which he married, Haydn received an appointment as Kapellmeister to Prince Paul Anton Esterhazy, a post which he held for twenty-eight years. It was during this time that Haydn composed innumerable sonatas and invented the string quartette.

After his retirement from the court, Haydn moved to Vienna and it was there that the youthful Mozart came to study with him. A beautiful and lasting friendship sprang up between the old master and one of Haydn's deepest sorrows was the death of his beloved pupil.

In spite of all the honors heaped on him, Haydn ever retained his childlike simplicity and sweetness of soul. He died May 31, 1809, after the French entered the city as conquerors, and his last composition was a song which he had written for his emperor, which later became the Austrian national anthem.

Haydn's gift to the world of music is beyond estimation and he has well been called the first great master of secular music.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY Daughter, if thou wouldst be accounted a miracle amongst wives, seek not knowledge of many things. For the understanding of the masculine heart is the beginning of wisdom; and a little intuition is better than a university degree, in the making of the perfect love-nest.

Go to. These FEW things, only, need a wife KNOW:

That any woman's silence is golden, but that a WIFE'S silence is radium before breakfast and after a hard day at the office!

That her Beloved is always right; and that whensoever his judgment falleth it is not HIS fault, but the fault of the firm, the family, the government or the world at large.

That if he had had the "chance" and the "good luck" of others, he could easily have made millions; and that, whatsoever he hath accomplished, hath been done by sheer grit and brilliancy, and in the face of "fearful odds."

That he is always weary and "overworked," and therefore in need of recreation upon the golf links; but that a psychological drama stirreneth his eyes and a highbrow concert wrecketh his nerves and wearieth his soul.

She knoweth that he is filled with truth and frankness; and that whatsoever he telleth her, it is SO, even though her eyes and ears may tell her that it is NOT so!

She knoweth that while others may be in need of spiritual refreshment he, himself, is filled with righteousness, and is not required to go to church, except upon rainy Sabbaths, when the links are wet, and the weather too cold for fishing.

She knoweth that whethersoever his eye may wander, he never so much as THINKETH of another woman. And blondes and Summer vamps are utterly repulsive to him. She knoweth that it is better to trust him, and be fooled, than to suspect him, and be miserable!

She knoweth that he is the fount of all wisdom and the wellspring of judgment and commonsense; and his opinions are "pearls of thought."

She knoweth that if he falleth in business or in an enterprise, it is the fault of an unappreciative world; but that if he succeedeth, it is because of his own unflagging industry and brilliant talents.

She knoweth that, howsoever simple and "easy" he may appear unto others, he is in truth wise, and deep and subtle; and that SHE, alone, of all the world understandeth and "appreciateth" him!

Verily, verily, a woman may not know how to boil an egg, sew on a button, mix a salad, run a car, sign a check or spell a three-syllable word. But if she knoweth these few things, she is wiser than all the sages. For she knoweth how to make a man HAPPY!

And he that hath married her will arise and call her "blessed"!

SELAH.

Radio Dialog

By C. WILLIAM RADOS

SUMMER is over. All except for more heat and rains. But in radio business as in all other business the boys have stopped playing. They are getting back to work. So while we will still wear our linen knickers awhile along with the broadcasters, we are starting to work again.

* * *

Last night a new, permanent broadcast came on the Boston air. It was a shoe broadcast from a WLEI in memory of the new store the company is opening. Business is increasing. Likewise the broadcast was an excellent reason for staying home to listen.

Motor car manufacturers are starting to advertise on the air. This is an encouraging sign because competition will kill off the moron programs.

* * *

However, shoes are only part of the necessary wardrobe of a completely dressed person. How about broadcasts from the makers of H. V. D.'s (Boston Water Dept.) What's the matter with music from the flannel pants union? The quarter from the dressing gowns? The sunspender corporation? The two pants suits trio (Hart Schaffner and Marx?)

* * *

We can just bet that you will never find the inside label of a good coat, the words "this garment; given through the courtesy of Sy and So." We will still have to pay our first installments.

* * *

There is nothing to become alarmed at in the increase in radio advertising. That a radio which will reproduce the finest notes of a large orchestra, with the circuit and number of tubes is not so important as the quality of the machine. As in all things else, the more a radio costs, the better it should perform. No $100 machine will do as well as a $19 machine will do as well as a $100 radio even if he is a friend of a salesman.

* * *

Then these coming broadcasts will be really appreciated. The distance thrill is to be compared to the people who like to drive around 60 miles an hour. Sometimes they get there sooner, and they seem to live longer. Our local programs this Fall and Winter will be the best ever. Our radio manufacturers and advertisers look forward to the best radio season by far.

MANY TYPES OF VACUUM TUBES

There are no fewer than 20 types of radio vacuum tubes manufactured under one trade name. This gives some idea as to how many different uses there are for vacuum tubes. In this particular make, they range all the way from the so-called peanut type operated by dry batteries, to the giant transmitting tubes, which become so hot in operation that they must be cooled by water.

BIG AIRPORT IS ADVOCATED BY FITZGERALD

Considering the advantages that the Boston Airport and Governor's Island furnish over every other section of the country, notably the big cities that are Boston's commercial rivals, Boston will indeed be asleep if it does not get to work at once, says former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

City and State, he points out, should join together and make adequate appropriation to build an airport at East Boston and at Governor's Island. Mr. Fitzgerald also praises the Boston Evening American, which, he states, is doing wonderful work in creating interest in the project.

By JOHN F. FITZGERALD,
Former Mayor of Boston.

Of course, Boston ought to have an airport, and one of the best in the world. If public opinion is properly stimulated this kind of an airport will be built.

J. F. Fitzgerald

The East Boston situation, taken in conjunction with Governor's Island, comprising more than 200 acres, is a natural spot, provided proper communication between the bridge or new subways is provided at once.

When you consider the advantage that the present Boston airport and Governor's Island furnish over every other section of the country, notably the big cities of the country that are Boston's commercial rivals, Boston will indeed be asleep if it does not get to work at once.

BOSTON BEHIND TIMES.

We have been notoriously behind in big developments in recent years. The East Bostonb ridge and tunnel project has been before the Legislature some two first term as Mayor, nearly twenty years ago, when. I proposed physical connection with the mainland between East Boston and Boston by either bridge or tunnel. Yet nothing has been done.

People laughed at the automobile twenty-five years ago. Now there are 25,000,000. Practically all of them built in the ports of the country where they were chasing Indians when we had skilled mechanics in New England. The people of the West had vision while our supposed leaders were asleep.

BANKERS ARE SHY.

I tried to induce the bankers and business men in Boston to let interested in providing capital for automobile building while I was mayor of Boston, but there was nothing doing. I remember one of our leading bankers telling me one day—I think it was in 1911—that the Detroit bankers would not finance because of the amount of automobile plants they were carrying.

The State authorities with whom the responsibility rests should hesitate no longer in providing legislation either bridge or tunnel for Boston, making it easily accessible to the city proper, and the territory north of Boston and the city and State should join together and make an adequate appropriation to build an airport in East Boston and at Governor's Island.

AIRPLANES FOR FREIGHT

The airplane properly developed will put us in direct communication with South America. It is only a course of a few years when airplanes of any size cargoes of merchandise and if Boston equips its airport so that Boston can ship goods to South America quicker than any other part of the world We are going to do business with South America.

What the earlier sailing vessels did for New England upkeep the Irship can do now.

The Boston American is doing wonderful work in connection with the stimulation of widespread interest in the building of an adequate airport in Boston.

INDIAN WOMAN, 115, SAYS TOBACCO KEEPS HER WELL

North Tonawanda, N. Y., Aug. 5 (I.N.S.).—Nancy Blacksmith Parker, 115 years old, of the Seneca Indian Reservation near Akron, attributes her long life and powerful vigor to the use of tobacco. Nancy says she has chewed tobacco and smoked a pipe ever since she was a girl and has never known a day's illness.

Nancy also likes a nip of good pre-war "stuff."

Ken Maynard to Stage Rodeo in Europe

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Los Angeles, Aug. 5.

LONDON, Paris and the Balkans are due for a thrill and a surprise. Ken Maynard and his horse are traveling to Europe early next Spring to produce two Westerns. Some of the scenes will be filmed here in California and finished in the Balkans, or some of the other small unfamiliar kingdoms.

Piccadilly and the Rue de la Paix take notice. Mr. Maynard will stage a rodeo with his cowboys in the heart of Paris and London. Could anything be more appropriate to carry out the idea of what European cities expect of California?

Charlie Rogers, who discovered, sponsored, and now produces Ken Maynard horse operas, will accompany his protege.

It just occurred to me that all this talk of First National sending a company abroad to make pictures is probably centered around this. Smart of me. Isn't it, to guess?

A great responsibility rests on the shoulders of Mortee Goodwin-Mayer in the selection of Jiggs for "Bringing Up Father." It appears that all the readers of the funny papers have their own ideas on who should play Jiggs and who should be Maggie Thalberg, not being able to listen to all of them, is sure of pleasing one person—himself. He has chosen J. Farrell McDonald, a little tall, perhaps, but with a bald pate that's not unlike George McManus's hero.

Julien Cowls has been selected to play Dinty Moore, and with Polly Moran and Marie Dressler lined up the production is going to be a hum. Frances Marion has written the screenario, and she is being especially careful not to offend the Irish society that objected to some of the scenes and titles in "The Callahans and the Murphys."

Something entirely new in motion pictures is being inaugurated by Frank Donovan through the Famous Authors Productions. Mr. Donovan is presenting two-reel productions based on stories written by celebrated authors, many of them classics in the world of literature. Among the famous stories that will be filmed are "The Necklace" and "A Piece of String," by De Maupassant; "A Lodging for the Night," and "Will o the Mill," by R. L. Stevenson; "A Desert Passion," by Balzac; "The Queen of Spades," by Pushkin; "The Deserted Village," Goldsmith, and others. A well known player will be chosen for each one of these classics.

The scandal mongers are due for a terrible disappointment. When Norma Talmadge took an apartment in Paris, they were sure that it meant a divorce. Now Norma is back in this country, having reached New York yesterday. She isn't coming right back to Hollywood, however. She is going to Saratoga for a month. Horse races are on there and there is no place in America at that time gayer or more alive.

Mervyn Leroy was envied by everyone at the First National studios when Jack Dempsey paid him a personal visit and presented him with the gloves with which he knocked out Sharkey. Mr. Dempsey made the presentation on the Leroy set where "No Place to Go" is being filmed. Mervyn is the boy who introduced Jack to Estelle Taylor, and after two years of matrimony, and she still grateful to him, That's a record, isn't it?

NEW BANK RATE BOOMS STOCKS

New York, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—The recovery in stock prices, which has been under way since Wednesday's opening break on the Coolidge statement, gained added momentum today by the reduction in the New York Federal reserve rediscount rate, with its implied stimulus to business. Transactions were the largest since the industrial shares, many of which were hit up to nearly 10 points to record high levels.

Waves of realising swept through the market at noontime, but all of them were fairly well absorbed. Houston Oil broke more than 6 points.

Public Utilities were one of the most impressive demonstrations of strength, the group of issues of this standing out with an extreme gain of 9 points. Peoples Gas, Consolidated Gas of Brooklyn and Third Street Railway prior preferred and American Express all reached new peak levels. Activity in the rail issues was in brisk demand during the afternoon.

New peak prices also were established by General Railway Signal, Colorado Fuel, Pittsburgh Steel, Drake, Atlantic Refining, R. H. Macy, Woolworth, The Fair and Metropolitan Chain Store issues.

Strong spots in the railroad division were also found in Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific.

TELEPHONE COMPANY TO SPEND $2,000,000 MORE

At its monthly appropriation meeting today the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company authorized the expenditure of $2,062,605 for new construction and improvements. Including this authorization, the total commitment of the company for plant expenditures this year is $16,937,704.

Of the amount authorized today, $1,349,000 is for the purchase and erection of hundreds of routine additions to plant in all parts of the company's territory during August, apportioned as follows. Metropolitan Boston, $303,250; other parts of Massachusetts, $290,000; Maine, $95,000; New Hampshire, $37,382; Vermont, $19,163; Rhode Island, $74,144.

RECOVER BODY OF FLIER MISSING SINCE FEBRUARY

Barnegat City, N. J., Aug. 5 (A.P.) —The body of Lieutenant Willard O. Harris, army aviator, who with Lieutenant William A. Gray was lost in a coast storm in February has been found near here. The body was lashed to his parachute and had become entangled in the wreckage of the gliding hook partly buried in the sand.

Harris and Gray left Mitchel Field on February 17 for Langley Field, Va., but the plane was last seen as it passed over a coast guard station near Forked River. A wing and a pontoon were found later found in the surf. Gray's body has never been found.

through the ether to this floating city, but all attention was concentrated on Coolidge's "I do not choose."

In the smoking room some nominated Mellon, some nominated Hoover, but, to paraphrase the old sweet poem, "All Sang Calvin Coolidge."

Mr. Henry White leaves $1,000,000 and remarks, in his will, that he leaves none of it to his wife because:

"There is nothing I could leave her that could adequately compensate for my love and affection for her."

That's doubtless true. Conjugal felicity is beautiful and priceless. And Mrs. White, originally a Vanderbilt, whose $10,000,000 helped her husband when he was young and handsome, does not NEED money. In ordinary cases, however, husbands should not conclude that losing them means losing everything, and that money wouldn't do any good.

Mr. Vincent Astor has new plans for a trip next year to the strange Galapagos Islands, where turtles live to be 300 years old and grow bigger than the dining room table.

He will visit those islands in a big yacht, now building. On the yacht he will carry a small, fast airplane. With this he expects to visit and explore the tops of the flat mountains on the Galapagos group, thus far unexplored. Mr. Astor flies and is a pilot. He was one of the first to establish an air line in America.

Future exploring parties will be ENTIRELY by air, going around the world in leisurely fashion, in ten or fifteen days, visiting the most interesting mountains, dropping down to cities and valleys occasionally, studying volcanoes "close up."

Commander Byrd believes that flying will conquer the whole earth inside of ten years.

Next year an airplane register will be published "classifying every airplane in the world." A few years hence such a register printed in the finest type would be too big to push in a wheelbarrow. There will be millions of planes where there are now hundreds.

Forty million automobiles on the ground and a million flying machines in the air will make this a busy country.

NEW BANK READY TO TEST SUPER-BOMBER

New York, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—The third giant bomber to be scientifically constructed recently for the U. S. army will be tested by the Keystone plant in Bristol, Pennsylvania, on Wednesday, the corporation announced today.

The Keystone plane will be known as a "Super Cyclops," and will carry four tons of military load including a one-ton bomb, in addition to six, possibly ten machine guns. "It will be powered by two 550-horsepower Packard motors and will weigh eight tons," it was said.

The all-metal steel wring of the new plane is the development of Professor Alexander Klemin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

CADMAN SEES MERITS IN THREE GREAT SECTS

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 5 (A.P.).—Greater unanimity by Protestants, Catholics and Jews of the principles which has made possible religious progress was asked by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman of Brooklyn, N. Y., Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York and Archbishop Hinsley of London on faith and order, meeting here to seek church unity.

"Reformed communions," said Dr. Cadman, "may learn that the Roman Catholic Church possesses in store 90 brush Illi ...

WOONSOCKET HILL TO BE SHUT DOWN SEPT. 1

Woonsocket, R. I., Aug. 5 (A.P.).—Frederick J. Jenckes of the Manville Jenckes Company today notified Charles L. Warner, president of the Woonsocket Chamber of Commerce and John C. Cosseboom, chairman of the citizens committee, that the Social Hill will be closed indefinitely September 1.

The mills have been running with a small force for some time working up stock on hand. The Nourse mill of the company will be closed for several months, but the Globe mill is running at almost capacity and expects to operate, the announcement said.

ADMITS CARRYING WINE, BUT DENIES BURGLARY

Northampton, Aug. 5 (A.P.)—Phillip A. Grace of Springfield, arrested Tuesday by State troopers on a charge of transporting 16 quarts of champagne, operating a car after registration had been revoked and having burglar's tools, was reindicted today, charged with breaking and entering the home of George B. McCallum, a hosiery manufacturer, who is now in Europe.

HEALTH, WEALTH AND BEAUTY AWAIT YOU AT PINE LAK

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON AUGUST 5, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare favorably in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

The Decision

On the MURDER OF PARMENTER AND BERARDELLI

After diligent inquiry without a parallel in the history of Massachusetts Governor Fuller has announced his decision in the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

His Excellency believes, he says, "with the jury," that these men were guilty of the killing of Frederio Parmenter and Alessandro Berardelli at South Braintree, on the 15th day of April, 1920, and the robbery of a shoe-factory pay-roll amounting to $15,776.51.

As a consequence of the Governor's judgment, reached only after he had carefully examined the trial record of 7,000 pages and questioned 200 witnesses, the convicted murderers are to die some time next week in the electric chair at the State Prison in Charlestown.

A fearless and honest executive, who for several months has carried a responsibility heavier and a burden more cruel than any official should be called upon to bear alone, Governor Fuller's decision is based upon what HE believes to be just and right.

What are the rest of us going to do?

Our Governor has discharged HIS duty faithfully and dispassionately.

What now becomes OUR duty?

The great mass of the people of Massachusetts, hitherto silent with respect to this celebrated case but nevertheless close observers, have every confidence in their Governor. They respect his integrity, have faith in his judgment. They will ACCEPT HIS DECISION LOYALLY, WITHOUT CARPING AND WITHOUT DISPUTE.

"Who murdered and robbed Frederic Parmenter and Alessandro Berardelli?"

THAT was the question before the jury at Dedham and the ONLY question.

Was that jury hastily assembled? To the contrary, a panel of 675 jurors was exhausted before the twelfth juror was agreed upon.

THEY heard 59 witnesses for the Commonwealth and 99 witnesses for the Defense; heard them examined and cross-examined; saw their behavior; studied their faces, on the witness stand.

The trial lasted six weeks; and on the 14th day of July, 1921, the jury took the case at 2:55 p. m. and, with time out for supper, returned at 7:50 p. m. with a UNANIMOUS verdict of "Guilty."

Since that day and hour hundreds of thousands of dollars have been poured out on behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Eminent attorneys have seen to it that no legitimate resource of the law was overlooked that could be used to their advantage.

There were seven motions for a new trial; there was a review of the proceedings; there have been two decisions by the Supreme Judicial Court.

The defendants have had EVERY POSSIBLE CHANCE, they have carried their case to the highest authority that can speak for Massachusetts, and no reason has been discovered for upsetting the verdict of the "twelve good men and true" of Norfolk.

Ignorance of the EVIDENCE in this case has been so general, despite the millions of words that have been printed about it, that Governor Fuller has seen fit to call attention to the fact that at the time of the trial at Dedham the defendant Vanzetti was already under a 15-years State Prison sentence for a holdup at West Bridgewater. At his trial for THAT offense, the Governor reminds us, Vanzetti "did not take the witness stand in his own defense . . . did not subject himself to cross-examination."

The Governor also emphasizes the fact that when they were arrested, 20 days after the South Braintree crime, Vanzetti carried a fully-loaded revolver and Sacco a loaded pistol, together with 20 loose cartridges.

President Lowell, of Harvard University; Robert Grant, former Judge of the Court of Probate and Insolvency of Suffolk County, and President Stratton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who at the call of the Governor conducted an investigation entirely independent of his, went quite as deeply into the case, reviewed the evidence and the legal proceedings, examined the witnesses and arrived UNANIMOUSLY at the same conclusions; namely:

1—That the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti was conducted fairly.

2—That there was no reason for giving them a new trial.

3—That they were guilty.

For their high-minded and unselfish service in connection with this investigation, Governor Fuller says, the public owes these gentlemen its gratitude. True, beyond question.

Extremists on both sides of what had almost come to be a Sacco-Vanzetti "affair" will, no doubt, continue to call names, one camp accusing the other of "sacrificing innocent men because of their political opinions," and the other quite as bitterly arraigning the condemned as "enemies of the State."

Sensible men and women, good citizens, will take no part in this crimination and recrimination.

Plain, everyday, old-fashioned murder and robbery, that is what Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were tried for and what they were found guilty of.

The cold-blooded murder of Frederic Parmenter and Alessandro Berardelli, which widowed two women and left their children fatherless, and the robbery of $15,776.51.

THAT was their crime and no other.

Their "defense committee" has collected more than $350,000.

They have taken the fullest advantage of every resource and, finally appealing to the Governor for clemency, have been told that they were fairly tried, rightfully found guilty, properly condemned to pay the penalty.

The law-abiding will take THEIR stand beside a Governor who, faced with a duty difficult and dangerous, has shown that he could not be influenced by threat or clamor.

NO MAN HAS EVER CREATED A FORCE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It has come again. About once in so often it returns like the phases of the moon or the sun spots. You can look for another one in a few weeks.

I refer to the announcement that the possibility of the creation of life has been broadcast by Sir Oliver Lodge. He regards the manufacture of life as not merely a future possibility, but perhaps inevitable.

What has happened in evolution, that is the creation of form from primeval molten material, or glowing gas, may be controlled and humanly managed in the future, he says.

He is also kind enough to announce that there is nothing repugnant to religion in this.

Of course religion does not depend upon any dogma of any kind, although many dogmas have been mixed up with religious teachings.

Religion is a deep instinct of the human soul, and will outlive all scientific discoveries.

But we may well doubt that Sir Oliver Lodge is a prophet or the son of a prophet. Spontaneous generation has been announced many times, but the announcement has always been contradicted afterwards. Nobody has yet created a living thing out of anything that was not already alive.

As far as that is concerned, no man has ever created a force. Forces come from the Infinite, and man's excellency merely consists in finding out how to use them.

Nobody knows what electricity is, or gravitation, or life, or love. They are simply forces that exist. We can turn them on and off, but nobody ever created one.

Looking for the origin of force is like looking for perpetual motion. The prophets of the spook world may announce the possibility of creating a force, but those of us who have our feet on the ground may well doubt it.

When somebody creates electricity or some other force, we may look for the creation of life as the next step.

Life continues the baffling mystery of mankind, and as far as we can see now, it will always continue to be such.

We know something—perhaps we know a great deal—but the origin of things is still concealed from us. Franklin could draw down the lightning from the skies, but nobody has yet arisen who can tell us how the lightning got into the skies in the first place. We can take life, or extinguish it, but no man knows how it originated. As far as we know, life comes from life, and where the first life started seems to remain up to the present time an inscrutable mystery.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHEN dark days come, and never yet have such been wholly banned, I do not yield to vain regret, but seek the task at hand. For always, be it high or low, some work which may be done will make time's tide more fleetly flow until the set of sun. And always he who toils will find no care so darkly looms but that with work, life grows more kind and still some promise blooms. The greatest of life's blessings, this, though few can understand how much it holds of weal and bliss, the humble task at hand! Whatever joys may slip away, may pass from my command, still may I keep for every day some waiting task at hand.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

NOT everyone who comes out of an expensive hotel licking his lips is one of the plutocrats. More than one Boston hotel has a lunch counter where one may have doughnuts and coffee. In one old place the guests carry their own on trays exactly as in the restaurants with less pretentious fronts. So when your friend says he has dined at the "Blitz" it may mean much or little.

• • •

In lunch rooms someone occasionally brings in a paper bag lunch. He buys a 5-cent cup of coffee and eats the lunch he carried. We have yet to see this in a hotel.

• • •

What great contrasts are evident in the unsettled region centering around Eliot and Tremont streets. In this whole area a great change is going on. Huge, new, shining buildings, smelling of fresh paint, are seen alongside tumble-down sheds and weather-beaten tenements.

• • •

Older residents remember when Eliot and Stuart streets were quiet and small. Now the scene is changed. Glittering lights, gilt lettering, taxicabs, scooting cabs, blah-blah of music and radio stores, lines in front of theatres and well-dressed men and women.

• • •

We sat in the balcony of a theatre. We wondered if we were too rich to sit up there. Soon we found out. Far behind us, in the next price section, was the head of a large Boston hospital, and with him an economist who earns a yearly salary in excess of five figures.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"WE," said young Lindbergh, his hand on his shining plane. "We made it."

He said it with quiet sincerity. He wasn't making pretty speeches—he was stating what was a simple truth to him. Somehow, the two of them had done that thing together. Something eager and proud and hopeful in the two of them had conquered space and time.

Queer, when you think of it, that he should have said it in just that way. Almost as if his plane were alive.

Well, how do you know it wasn't? Not a life that expresses itself like yours or mine, of course. But there are infinite forms of lives. Couldn't a plane hold some secret, shining life of its own?

What was it, at any rate, that plane?

A mass of aluminum, steel, silk, canvas, spruce, leather—yes, these things went into the body of the plane. But something else went into that body, something infinitely more potent and lasting than metal or wood. THOUGHT. Before ever that plane was built in materials it was built in thought. Built perfectly, completely, to the last delicate detail. Hands didn't build that plane. Thought built it, directing those hands, shooting its pattern through those hands into the metal and cloth and wood.

Thought of Men

The Thought of men, of scores of men, went into that plane. The Faith of men—the Force of men, gathering there in the Spirit of St. Louis—the accumulated Will Power of scores of men unfurling its wings, rising—RISING!

Is it any wonder that Lindbergh spoke as if his plane were a living thing?

Take anything you want—ships, for instance. Have you ever heard sailors talk about Hoodoo Ships—ships that go wrong from the day of their launching until their final wreck? Something more, there, than just superstition. It happens so often.

Or houses—a friend of mine has just bought a house in Connecticut—an old farmhouse of Revolutionary days. Hand-hewn timbers, rambling stone wall laid stone by stone—a staunch old house, as mellow and trustworthy as the lives that built themselves into it.

Built themselves into it—? How do you know they didn't?

Flying thoughts made that plane. Homing thoughts made that house. Tender dreams. Noble ambition. Ancient faith. Pride. Loyalty as stalwart as those thick stone walls. Things like that aren't just names. They live inside a man. They make him cold or hot, grave or reverent. They spread about him, to the lives he touches, to the things he makes. You can almost see the spirit of such like that while they live, walking tall and straight beside them.

Living Force.

Wouldn't a Spirit like that some how manage to leave its pattern on the bricks and timbers it used? Would some of the living force of those dreams persist in the house they had made?

This thing is sure. That house my friend has bought does things to people. It has done things to my friend. He is a famous American editor—very busy and successful tense, shrewd, powerful. That house has quieted him—simplified him—altered his whole sense of values. Not suddenly or dramatically—insidiously—I doubt if he himself knows how he has changed. He has developed a taste for simple food—boiled beef, greens—quiet hours walking in the garden with his little boy—hasn't much use any more for the risqué stories some of the younger writers are turning out.

"I'm going up to The House," he says, just as if it were a living person.

Well—?
